Ferry Passengers Plucked from Ice

HALIFAX (CP) — Passengers and crew from the CN ferry William Carson were being taken to St. Anthony and St. John's, Nfld., today after the vessel was ripped open by an iceberg and sent to the bottom off the Labrador coast.

No injuries or loss of life were reported by CN or search and rescue officials.

They said 128 passengers and crew were plucked from ice floes and lifeboats by helicopters and the icebreaker Sir Humphrey Gilbert after the William Carson went down just north of the Strait of Belle Isle.

However, the number of persons aboard the Carson on her first northward voyage of the season fluctuated several times in reports from CN and rescue officials.

They said the confusion was because only the purser of the ship—the man who sells tickets to those who have not purchased them in advance—knows for sure how many persons may have boarded at points along the ship's route.

The purser, H. Reddick of Mount Pearl, a St. John's suburb, was among 86 persons taken aboard the Sir Humphrey Gilbert early today and was not available for comment. The ship was en route to St. Anthony.

Officials at CN Marine headquarters at Moncton, N.B., said they assumed on the basis of the message that the Sir Humphrey Gilbert was making for port that the number aboard the Carson had been checked with the purser.

At one point, CN reported the Carson carried 110 persons, 88 crew members and 22 passengers. Later they raised the crew figure to 90 and said the total was "about 125."

Meanwhile, a Canadian Forces Tracker aircraft continued to sweep the area where the Carson went down about 18 miles off the Labrador coast. A spokesman said it was a routine procedure and that they had no reason to believe anybody was missing.

Bronfman Crams French

The president of The Seagram Co. Ltd. and co-owner of the Montreal Expos baseball club was enrolled in the course at the Institute Linguistique de Jonquiere, a distinguished language-training centre.

Bronfman, who vowed on the eve of the Nov. 15 provincial election that he would pull his distillery company out of Quebec if the Parti Quebecois won, had a special reason for boning up on his French.

Denis Tremblay, director of the language institute, said Seagram is planning a major promotion across Quebec during the coming months, and Bronfman will be one of the main particippants in the campaign.

JET STUNT PILOT DIES

PARIS (AP) — A U.S. jet fighter plane crashed and burned today before thousands of spectators at Le Bourget airport on the opening-day of the Paris Air Show. The pilot, Howard Nelson, died en route to hospital, officials said.

The plane, a Fairchild A10 crashed while performing acrobatic manoeuvres. Witnesses said the anti-tank attack plane was coming out of a loop when the tail and wings fell off.

BASIC MINING POLICY

Socreds Keeping Coal Royalties

Times News Services

NELSON — The provincial government will keep the existing $1.50-a-ton royalty on coal, Premier Bennett said Thursday in a major coal policy statement.

"This policy establishes a framework within which this vital natural resource will be developed for the maximum benefit of all British Columbians," Bennett said after a cabinet meeting.

He predicted coal will eventually out-rank the lumber industry in providing employment, resource revenue and taxation. The new policy is aimed at ensuring that coal development is carried out by private enterprise with the government providing an investment climate and the port facilities.

"This government believes that it is absolutely essential that we define for the industry and the public the steps to be taken for responsible management of this resource," Bennett said. "The government also realizes that its policies must be consistent and predictable to create investors' confidence."

Bennett described the policy as the most important resource announcement that the Social Credit government has made and is likely to make for the next two or three years.

Mines Minister Jim Chabot said the policy, which ends months of speculation, will bring stability to the industry, opening the way for new development in the northeast and southeast sectors of B.C.

Key points in the policy include:

—Reserving to B.C. the right to meet its coal needs first.

—Setting up a new system of grant licences, which will incorporate competitive tendering while not affecting existing or currently-planned development.

—Making coal development consistent with over-all provincial energy, economic, environmental, regional and social objectives.

Protesters In Nelson Shove Bennett

NELSON (CP) — Premier Bennett was pushed several times Thursday as he walked through a crowd of 200 demonstrators on his way into the Nelson provincial office building.

Stores in the city's business district were closed in support of the demonstrators who paraded down the city's main street.

The demonstrators, demanding a degree-granting university for this city, chanted "don't let him in," and blocked the premier's path into the building for about five minutes.

The crowd moved back to let Bennet pass at the request of a union official from Kootenay Forest Products. City police trying to protect the premier were unable to reach him.

A coalition of business, labor and student groups had organized for several weeks to present a clear demand for a degree-granting university during the cabinet visit.

Education Minister Pat McGeer announced earlier this week that only a first and second-year university program would be available at Nelson's Notre Dame University this fall.

At a luncheon address Thursday, Bennett said the decision to curtail the university's program had been a difficult one, which his government was not afraid to face "head-on."

Feeling in the town ran high from the beginning of the day. About 300 people, some carrying placards, jogged with Bennett in the morning and protestors later confronted McGeer outside a hotel and demanded resumption of the four-year university program this fall.

West MPs Fear Massive Spills

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Progressive Conservative MPs warned Thursday of massive West Coast oil spills following the collapse of a pipeline proposal to ship Alaskan oil to the mid-West United States.

Without the pipeline, Alaska crude oil would be shipped down the West Coast in tankers, posing a "massive environmental threat," Benno Friesen (PC—Surrey-White Rock) told the Commons.

His comments came in the wake of a decision by Kitimat Pipe Line Ltd. to withdraw an application for an oil-bearing pipeline from Kitimat to Edmonton and on to the United States.

External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson agreed that the decision probably will lead to increased oil tanker trafiic along the West Coast.

Canada has been discussing with the U.S. alternative methods of moving Alaska crude, and will continue to do so, he said.

Prince George, meanwhile, stands to lose 500 jobs, revenue from another 800 workers and a share of $25 million to be spent on heavy equipment if the Kitimat-to-Edmonton pipeline is cancelled, a consultant for the company which studied the pipeline proposal said Thursday.

Dave Ross said that during peak construction the pipeline would have about 1,400 workers in the Prince George area and of these about 500 likely would be hired from the city.

Ross said that the city would benefit not only from the wages paid to city workers on the line, but from those living anywhere in the region.

Prince George would serve as major distribution and supply centre for pipeline construction, he said.

Envoy Switch Approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Breaking a 16-year chill, the United States and Cuba have agreed to exchange middle-rank diplomats, a State Department spokesman said today.

"We have reached an agreement with Cuba on exchanging diplomatic interest sections," spokesman John Trattner said.

CANADIAN DOLLAR SKIDDING

OTTAWA (UPI) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Thursday he was not concerned about heavy trading that sliced 0.8 of a cent off the Canadian dollar and pushed it to a low of 94.0 U.S. cents.

"I am not particularly distressed by the rate at the present time," Macdonald said.

Today in Montreal, the Canadian dollar was trading at $.948 (U.S.).

New York dealers said the slide might be due to conversions of Canadian dollars to make payments on foreign debts, but Macdonald declined to speculate on what he believed had caused the sudden fall.

Fort Nelson BCR Link Will Remain: Socred

FORT NELSON (CP) — The government of British Columbia is committed to maintaining the B.C. Railway extension between Fort St. John and this northern community, legislature speaker Ed Smith said Thursday.

Smith, Social Credit MLA for Peace River North, said on an open-line radio program that "the government has no intention of abandoning or deserting rail services" between the two points.

Alan Richmond, B.C. Rail's chief engineer, told the Royal Commission into the railway's operation that he has almost as many men attempting to maintain traffic over the 250-mile extension opened in 1971 as he has on the remaining 450 miles.

He said problems are caused by such engineering flaws as poorly selected material for the grade, improperly conducted winter work, undersized subgrades and inadequate drainage studies.

The White Pass and Yukon Corp., which also testified at the inquiry now under way in Vancouver, said this link and the extension to Dease Lake should be scrapped to save the railway from economic doom.

Meanwhile, a former Railwest executive has charged that the BCR management hampered operations of the doomed Railwest rail car plant in Squamish to such an extent that Railwest was plagued with delays and unnecessary expenses.

Harold Edmonds also said the railway gave such poor assistance when Railwest opened in 1975 that workers once threatened to stop work after they found errors in payroll cheques prepared by B.C. Rail accounting facilities.

Edmonds, Railwest's finance manager until December, 1976, told the Royal Commission, "the manufacturing of rail cars is nearly as distinctive from railroading as law is from medicine."

NEWS BRIEFS

Policemen Slain

BELFAST (Reuter) — The Irish Republican Army said today it killed three policemen Thursday in an ambush on a country road and said it was done because of the way people are being questioned.

Woodward's Losing

VANCOUVER (CP) — Woodward Stores Ltd., reported Thursday that it sustained a net loss from operations of $369,715, equal to six cents a share, in the 13 weeks ended April 30, compared with a loss of $475,861 or seven cents a share in the corresponding period the year before.

Rentals Improved

VANCOUVER (CP) — Unfair advantages for either landlords or tenants will be wiped out under proposed revisions to the Landlords and Tenants Act, Rentalsman Barrie Clark said Thursday. See story on page 13.

Bachelor Father

OTTAWA (UPI) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday that he sees no problems co-ordinating his private life as a bachelor father and his public life as prime minister of Canada. For this and other stories on Trudeau's weekly press conference, see Page 11.

Lawyer Guilty

VANCOUVER (CP) — Victoria lawyer Eloise Wilson was found guilty of second-degree murder Thursday in the strangulation death of her elderly cousin and sentenced to life imprisonment. See story Page 24.

Moluccan Mediators Picked

ASSEN (AP) — Dutch officials and South Moluccan extremists agreed today on the names of two mediators to try to negotiate an end to twin sieges in the northern Netherlands, a government spokesman said.

But Wim van Leeuwen of the justice ministry said the proposed mediators have not yet agreed to serve as go-betweens to free the 60 or so hostages held on a commuter train and in a school.

Van Leeuwen did not identify the proposed mediators or reveal their nationalities.

The agreement followed a meeting earlier today in the Dutch capital, The Hague, between government officials and a delegation of Moluccan leaders, including Pieter Willem Lokollo, vice-president of the self-styled South Moluccan government-in-exile.

Earlier this week the government rejected the names of two South Moluccans proposed by the terrorists.

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Many's the greenhorn prospector whose visions of parading dance-hall girls and an eternal supply of Redeye have vanished in the assay office.

It's not very often it happens the other way around, however, as it did recently to George Dubinsky of Nanaimo.

A Calgary assay laboratory made an error that sent Dubinsky reeling with dreams of a rich silver mine, although he says deep down he knew all along it was too good to be true.

Dubinsky is a powder man working for a contracting firm charged with blasting out a bluff for the widening of the Island Highway six miles north of Duncan near the foot of Mount Sicker.

Dubinsky is also an experienced miner, and he knows his ores.

He also knows Mount Sicker produced a fair bit of copper at one time

So when the smoke cleared from one of his roadside blasts exposing the tell-tale peacock turquoise, he thought he better stake in the area just in case another major copper discovery was in the offing.

A while later a Calgary-based salesman for a major oil company and personal friend happened to drive by, and Dubinsky told him of his claim.

The salesman said he had a geologist friend working for the oil company in Calgary that would do an assay for him, so Dubinsky gave him a sample.

The next thing Dubinsky knew, he was being wooed by the mineral exploration department of the oil company.

It seems the oil company sent the sample to a laboratory, and the lab reported back the ore assayed out at 38 ounces of silver to the ton.

"At 38 ounces to the ton, it wouldn't take a hell of a lot of ore to make a paying silver mine," said a chemist with the analytical lab of the provincial mineral resources branch.

The bubble burst when the lab rechecked its calculations and discovered it had copied down the wrong figures and that the true silver content was .26 ounces per ton.

Dubinsky said he couldn't see how anyone could make such an error, but he didn't believe the first assay anyway.

The lab wrote him a letter of apology, and the oil company wrote saying it was no longer interested in his property.

"I'm not going to get rich on this one," he said showing remarkabley good humor.

And so the story ends, almost...

Gold showed up at .12 ounces per ton and there is some copper. If the deposit is big enough, it might support a mine.

A mine could, however, produce its own difficulties. A spokesman for the highways department said a similar find occurred once before and the construction worker-turned-miner had to pay for the relocation of the highway.

A setback like Dubinsky's might have been a heart-breaker for the old-time prospector needing a grubstake and facing another lonely stint in the back country.

Dubinsky may not have his silver mine, but he's still got his $10.23 an hour job with the blasting crew.

But as one long-forgotten placer miner scratched on the wall of his log cabin: "It's better to have staked and lost, than not to have staked at all."

Move Afoot To Nip Strike

VANCOUVER (CP) — Moves were being made Thursday to head off a strike in British Columbia's construction industry by the cement masons Local 919.

The industry had been heading for its first settlement without a strike or lockout in a decade until the federal Anti-Inflation Board rolled back a 99-cent hourly package over one year by 14 cents.

While the B.C. and Yukon Building and Construction Trades Council pact of 10 unions decided to appeal the ruling, the cement masons served 72-hour strike notice based on an earlier vote by its 400 members.

Business manager Frank Stevens said the plan was to set up picket lines at 8 a.m. Monday, but that has been called off pending a meeting today with representatives of the other building unions and the possibility of a hearing before the provincial labor relations board.

DEPORTED CIA AGENT QUITS U.K.

He left aboard a cross-channel ferry for the Netherlands, the second U.S. citizen to leave Britain under a deportation order in the last seven days.

Agee, 41, was served with the order last November for unspecified activities described as "prejudicial to national security."

He failed to persuade British authorities to reveal why he had been told to leave.

Smelter Dispute Boils

By TOM KARSAY

TRACY, Que. (CP) — A dispute over safety conditions at Quebec Iron and Titanium Corp. (QIT) boiled over Thursday as 500 workers retaliated against a company lockout by occupying the smelter.

A company spokesman told reporters the plant was closed down at 4 a.m. EDT Thursday after the company could "no longer guarantee the safety of equipment and workers" because of a union work slowdown that began May 4.

But workers refused to leave and by daylight had evicted non-union personnel and set up barricades, vowing to continue their occupation until demands for better working conditions were met.

Entrances and doors to plant buildings were blocked by huge tractors and other pieces of heavy machinery.

The 1,200-member Union of Iron and Titanium Workers, affiliated with the Confederation of National Trade Unions, has scheduled two membership meetings for today to vote on company contract proposals.

The union executive has condemned the proposals — including a provision allowing workers to stop work immediately when they feel dangerous conditions exist — and recommended their rejection.

Union spokesmen complained that working conditions at the smelter are always dangerous and "unacceptable and inhuman" because of high dust and noise levels and poor lighting.

Provincial Conservative leader Scott Wallace today said he is angry about being made to "look like a dingaling" by being omitted from the head table at Thursday's Joe Clark meeting.

But he concedes it might not have been a deliberate snub.

There was no space at the head table for Wallace or for Prince George-Peace River Conservative MP Frank Oberle, provincial president of the party, when national leader Clark addressed a meeting sponsored by Victoria Chamber of Commerce.

The problem, said Wallace, was that he and Oberle were invited to parade in with the head table party.

"There we were marching in to applause and when we got to the head table we were left standing while the others sat down. There was no place for us.

"We were left looking like a couple of dingalings."

The second problem, he said, is that no one made any effort to find him a seat after the problem was evident. He and Oberle had to take the only two seats left in the crowded hall — at the back of the room.

And thirdly, Wallace said, relations have been a bit cool between the provincial and federal wings of the Conservative Party. Wallace said in face-to-face talks with Clark on Wednesday night he asked for a change in the policy of having two separate organizations for the Conservative party in B.C. but he is not sure he convinced Clark.

"As a result of these things I was quite angry — very angry — when I was left off the head table.

"You know I am an open man. When I feel angry, I express my anger. When I feel like singing and dancing, I sing and dance.

"The official policy of the (federal) party seems to be to keep a polite distance from the provincial Conservative organization. Mr. Clark is trying to avoid offending the Social Crediters and Liberals he is trying to convince should vote for him in the federal election."

Wallace, however, conceded that there might not have been a deliberate snub because the meeting was organized by the chamber and not by the Conservative party.

Flight Backers Pull a Sneaky

Associated Press

After a two-year battle, promoters of a floating international airport in Seattle outflanked their opponents and initiated twice-daily air service between Lake Union, Wash., and the inner harbor in Victoria.

The first twin turbo-prop, 17-passenger seaplane landed alongside the floating terminal, ending the fight of Airwest Airlines, a Canadian commuter airlines, to establish a Victoria route.

"They pulled a real sneaky on us," said Beth Means of the Eastlake community council. The council is one of several groups which fought the seaplane terminal for two years.

It claims the airline's owner had a quiet public hearing in Washington, D.C., obtained the necessary federal licenses and bypassed the City Shorelines Act.

Local groups had maintained that the terminal would increase noise levels and traffic congestion on Lake Union. Airwest also confronted federal and local rules.

Southern parts of the interior should enjoy a pleasant day today. Some patchy high cloud will be present but sufficient sunshine is expected to penetrate to allow afternoon temperatures to reach the low twenties. Elsewhere in the interior cooler conditions will prevail with afternoon showers likely in some areas.

Meanwhile, another Pacific system is gathering moisture some three hundred miles offshore. This will spread rain to the coast by this afternoon. The precipitation area will slowly expand to encompass most of the province by Saturday. Thus the Pacific playground of Canada seems destined to forge through another cool wet weekend.

NO LUXURY ON QE 2

SOUTHAMPTON, England (AP) — The 1,600 passengers stranded on the luxury liner Queen Elizabeth 2 were allowed to leave the vessel Thursday, struggling unaided with suitcases and trunks.

Shipyard workers protesting Cunard Line's decision to refit the liner in New York rather than in a British shipyard forced the passengers to remain on the vessel outside Southampton for nine hours.

After the workers relented and allowed the liner to dock, passengers found stevedores had stopped work 35 minutes earlier as part of an overtime ban.

A promise of other work at the shipyard by Cunard led to the decision to allow the passengers to disembark.

Carter Stresses Stand Supporting Dissidents

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Carter administration issued a pointed warning Thursday that it will not be dissuaded from its public campaign for human rights around the world by the harassment of individual dissidents in foreign countries.

Although not directed specifically at the Soviet Union, the warning came in response to questions about reports that treason charges are being prepared against Anatoly Scharansky, a Soviet dissident who was arrested in March after a newspaper accused him of working for the Central Intelligence Agency.

"It would be a fundamental misunderstanding to assume the President can be forced by the actions of other governments from speaking out," White House press secretary Jody Powell said in response to reporters' questions.

Asked if the United States viewed the move against Scharansky as an attempt to silence President Carter on the human rights issue, Powell replied: "I would hope no one would have that goal in mind. It would be a sadly mistaken assumption."

Moreover, Powell added, Carter's determination to pursue his human rights goals appears to be shared by dissidents in other countries who face the highest risk of harassment in retaliation.

"People are involved in this because they see a good greater than individual freedom from retaliation," he said. ". . . The issue has always been a higher good and a goal that goes beyond individuals."

Guerrilla Attack Success: Smith

SALISBURY, Rhodesia (UPI) — Prime Minister Ian Smith says Rhodesia's five-day attack against guerrilla bases in Mozambique was "very successful" and should not jeopardize the Anglo-American peace effort.

The white government said Thursday its forces had begun withdrawing from Mozambique, where they destroyed four guerrilla bases, occupied a major town and killed 32 guerrillas. It was Rhodesia's longest military operation inside a neighboring black nation.

"I have heard that it's been very successful," Smith said on Rhodesian television.

Smith called the invasion "a completely defensive exercise which, as far as Rhodesia is concerned, will have no effect at all" on the Anglo-American effort to achieve black majority rule in 1978.

"But I can't vouch for the people on the other side," he said.

Shake Up The Tories

Maureen McTeer's remarks on reporters who say unkind things about her husband's leadership of the Progressive Conservative party are understandable, and even admirable from the standpoint of family solidarity. But the couple's strong mutual loyalty is the only solidarity to be seen in the Tory camp these days. Despite excuses that its a fact finding tour, Clark's seven-day British Columbia tour has not been a raving success. Other than on the southern part of Vancouver Island, where Tory sentiment is strong, the people of B.C. have been friendly enough, but seemingly indifferent too, as though Clark was an irrelevant politician. And considering the mess Liberals made in handling north coast ferry subisides so recently, the visit does not bode well for Tory hopes in the next election.

Some facts won't disappear, though, despite Clark's nonchalant facade. The dean of Alberta's 19 Tory MPs defected to the Liberals. A front bench Conservative MP from Prince Edward Island, and a loud voice in the party's progressive wing, was stripped of some duties by Clark in gratuitous fashion, simply because he couldn't vote in conscience with caucus. And now the Tory Quebec wing is trading charges, blaming one another for defeat in five recent byelections.

Claude Wagner claims a few Quebec Conservatives are waging a vendetta against him. Another Quebec Tory MP, Roche LaSalle, suggests that Wagner leave the party if he is not happy with Clark's leadership. As the war of words continues, 3,500 miles away the Conservative leader drops in and out of the B.C. rain forest. Even provincial Conservative leader Dr. Scott Wallace has come out during the national leader's visit here saying Clark will lose his leadership if the Tories continue to destroy themselves from within. These observations from Conservative stalwarts don't augur well for a party that only has the support of 32 per cent of the Canadian electorate, according to the latest Gallup poll.

If Joe Clark's leadership is threatened so is the Progressive Conservative party, a fact that seems to escape the Tories as they claw away at each other. The Liberals now have a commanding 47 to 32 advantage in the national poll. Clark is still the same man he was six months ago when the Conservatives had a commanding lead. What has changed is the party. Never satisfied with its leader, the Tories' thwarted powers continue to bicker, leaving an impression they are more interested in personal power than the country's well being. There is also something antique about a party that would head a householder letter for support from president Michael Meighen with a strident message about letting private enterprise get Canada going again. At present the private sector has more tax concessions and subsidies than ever before and nearly a million Canadians are out of work. Visions of Bay Street and R. B. Bennett will dance before the eyes of many old timers reading this message, so distainful of the national electorate.

Still, Canada would be a sorrier state if the Conservatives become a remnant of themselves. Rather than walking the slick piers of B.C.'s coastal communities, the leader should get back to Ottawa and deal with the infighting. Further internecine bickering and the Tories will suffer more tragic consequences than loss of points in a poll. Clark may be down, but he is far from out. In the wake of his troubles it is the party rather than the leadership that needs a shaking up. If Clark can't do it, the whole quarreling ship may sink, leaving the country with what amounts to a one party state.

A Farewell to Editor George Oake

Today was George Oake's last day with the Victoria Times. He joined the paper in 1969 as an editorial writer and rose to be City Editor in charge of our local news coverage, and then Editor with responsibility for this page.

Whatever the task in hand, Oake brought to it an unflinching honesty of purpose and a deep-rooted respect for the right of other people to hold views contrary to his own.

His contacts with the public were graced by an unfailing courtesy on his part, no matter how it was strained by cranks and bigots, of whom Victoria has its share. It is a tribute to him that those who were at loggerheads with one another frequently attacked him for completely opposite reasons.

The relationship between an editor and his publisher is not always easy. Some publishers like to make the editorial page a vehicle for their own prejudices, or the prejudices of people they are anxious to please. The editor then finds himself acting as a tape recorder.

Oake and I talked almost every day about everything under the sun. Occasionally I acted as an anvil on which he hammered out his ideas. My only instruction to him was this:

"The Times does not shrink from discussing any subject that is in the public interest. The only injunction on the editorial writer is that he strives to be fair and carries the discussion through to a positive conclusion."

These rules will guide George Oake's successor, Barbara McLintock, who joins the Times as editor on June 13.

My personal good wishes go with George Oake to Ottawa where his next post is with Southam News Services. My favorite charities will miss the fines I collected for his split infinitives, a habit he never overcame. All of us at the Times will miss him for other reasons.

Determining 'Special Status'

OTTAWA — The word "paradox" has been used so often to describe Prime Minister Pierre Elliot Trudeau that to trot it yet again runs the risk of turning a crisp phrase into a cliche.

Paradox, though, is the only adequate way to describe what now is happening to Trudeau. He has become, at one and the same time, the person most likely to save the unity of the country and the person most likely to cause its dismemberment.

Trudeau's claims as saviour all are obvious enough. Other party leaders believe as passionately in unity; Trudeau alone, as the by-election results show, can match Premier Rene Levesque's popularity in Quebec.

Across the country as whole, Trudeau now leads in the Gallup Poll by a margin of 47 per cent to 32 per cent. Only in the West is he weak, and even there his support is beginning to wax.

Trudeau's Authority

At a time of national crisis, Trudeau therefore possesses the preconditional authority of a national leader: he can speak to all the nation.

Trudeau, though, cannot speak all of the right words. The phrase he cannot utter, after a life-time of condemning it, is "special status."

Amid all the confusion, emotional and intellectual, since the Parti Quebecois victory last Nov. 15, just one element is beyond doubt: "Canada will never be the same again," as former Ontario Premier John Robarts said in a speech in Toronto a fortnight ago.

The new shape of Canada is, as yet, impossible to discern. Maybe we'll turn into a loose confederacy of 10 provincial principalities. Maybe our internal boundaries will change and we'll turn into five or six regional governments with an emasculated central government acting as a secretariat for them.

Amid all the options, these of Quebec are the clearest. Either Quebec will become, as Levesque wants, independent, or the province will achieve some form of special status.

The term "special status" or "associate state," or "particular status" is itself vague. Since 1867, Quebec in fact has enjoyed official special status — its own civil law; its own educational system. Quebec today exercises unofficial special status in everything from its own pension plan to its own tax collection.

To imagine that anything less than formal special status for Quebec now is possible is to imagine the impossible. As the recent Toronto Star poll showed, 58 per cent of Quebecers demand special status as a minimum. As important, the Parti Quebecois government — "the enemy within" in Trudeau's provocative phrase — will be around for four years and at a guess for eight years at a minimum.

Eight years of constitutional debate is eight more than any country can stand. Separation would end the agony, only to begin it again in a different way for the newly independent Quebec and for the truncated rump of Canada. Special status, just conceivably, might end the agony for ever.

The arguments against special status are familiar, and are convincing. The logical extension of special status might prove, in the end, to be separation anyway. Quebecers would lose their influence in Ottawa. Other provinces might demand the same powers and so reduce the country to ungovernability.

These arguments, clever and subtle, aren't those of some academic. They are the certitudes Trudeau has written about, spoken about, and acted upon for more than 20 years. To about-face on wage and price control as he did caused Trudeau no more than a brief political embarassment. To about-face on special status would be, for him, a permanent and personal humiliation.

Not quite. Dig into Trudeau's writings and you'll find something — the mark of a politician rather than of an intellectual—to fit any occasion. "There is no need to evoke the notion of a national state to turn Quebec into a province 'different from the others,' " wrote Trudeau in an essay in 1965. "In a great number of vital areas, Quebec has full and complete sovereignty under the Canadian constitution."

Necessity Dictates

Now apply Trudeau's concept of "dual sovereignty" to the notion of special status. It fits. Special status enables a state (Quebec) to be sovereign in certain areas — culture, communications, industrial development and the like — within the sovereignty of a larger state (Canada).

The formula sounds clumsy. It may also, though, sound familiar. Levesque's proposal, you'll recall, isn't for separation as such but for "political sovereignty within an economic association." The pattern persists.

Gaps remain between Trudeau's "dual sovereignty," the "special status" that most Quebecers demand and the "sovereignty-association" that Levesque insists upon. To close those gaps all that's needed is for everyone to shut their eyes while signing on the dotted line.

Impossible? Not in the least. In necessity, a country as much as a person can invent anything. And as Trudeau also wrote in that 1965 essay, "The measure of sovereignty each government has is dictated by necessity."

JAMES RESTON

Young Thinks Only Black

WASHINGTON — Andrew Young, the U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, has emerged as the most talkative and controversial member of President Carter's cabinet. Also the most aggressive and consistent. Seldom a day goes by that he doesn't make the headlines with some vivid criticism of some country, including his own, about how they are being beastly to his fellow blacks.

Recently, he has been wandering around Africa lecturing Ian Smith of Rhodesia and Prime Minister John Vorster of South Africa on the sins of white minority rule. Passing through London, he condemns the old British colonial assumptions, and coming back, he suggests that the Swedes are liberal but are about as liberal with the blacks as the whites are in the Queens borough of New York — thereby infuriating the political leaders in both Sweden and Queens.

Defies Spirit

Nobody is immune to Andy Young's criticism, not even the Carter administration. When he came back through London from Africa and was asked what he thought about Cubans sending "military advisers" to Ethiopia, he said that the state department had denounced this intervention. He supposed, he said ironically, that he ought to do the same, but maybe Cuba's intervention could be a good thing — might even save some lives.

When President Carter was asked at his latest press conference why he fired Maj. Gen. Singlaub for speaking out against the withdrawal of American ground troops in South Korea but tolerated Andy Young's dissents from official policy, the president replied, "Well, I know of no instance when Andy Young has violated the policy described."

The truth is that Andy Young is doing what he damn well pleases. He is going beyond, even defying Carter's spirit of compromise. He is irritating the allies while Carter is trying to win their co-operation. He is infuriating the Congress precisely when Carter is trying to work out some kind of consensus at home and abroad.

He is even picking fights with the Swedes, of all people, by suggesting that they are "terrible racists," and while Jimmy Carter keeps supporting him, his state department is appalled by Young's antics, and the rest of his cabinet wonders what the president would think if they popped off all over the world like Andy Young.

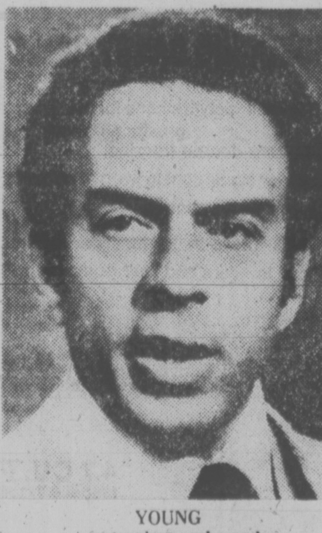
In short, the main criticism here is not of Young but of Carter. The president knows Young very well — better than anybody else in Washington. Young wanted this job at the United Nations more than any other — and as the most articulate and attractive black in Carter's presidential campaign, he got it.

But Young is not acting like a U.S. ambassador to the Unityed Nations. He is acting instead like an ambassador of the United States to Africa, and even like an ambassador of black Africa to Washington. You can talk to him at length about his job, but he seldom mentions this country's problems with Canada, Latin America, Europe, Asia, the Soviet Union, China, or Japan. As a southern politician, he used to complain with great eloquence that the North could only think "white," but now he only seems to think "black."

Andy Young is not the first prominent politician who has held this job as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, living in the U.S. embassy in the Waldorf-Towers, and flying down on the shuttle to sit in on cabinet meetings in the White House.

Eisenhower nominated Henry Cabot Lodge for the job. Kennedy sent Adlai Stevenson to the UN to get rid of him. Johnson diverted Arthur Goldberg from the Supreme Court into the UN, and Pat Moynihan was the first ambassador against rather than to the United Nations. But Andy Young is something quite different.

He is using the UN as a platform for his own views of the racial conflicts of the world, and more than all the other U.S. ambassadors in that job, even more than any other member of Jimmy Carter's cabinet, he has a powerful political constituency supporting him.



YOUNG

Carter's Fault

Carter could fire any other member of his cabinet without losing any major body of voters, but Young has the blacks on his side, and seems to think he can do and say what he pleases.

If he were a congressman, or a columnist, or a propagandist, nobody could object to the ardent violence of his thought — even if he were an assistant to the president, arguing his racial philosophy — but as an ambassador to the United Nations, flying around the world lecturing everybody on their moral duties — this is something new in the history of politics and diplomacy.

And the responsibility for this is not Andy Young's but the president's. Young made clear to the president from the start what he intended to do, and he has done it. He's not an ambassador, or even a faithful reporter of Jimmy Carter's human rights policies, but a brilliant propagandist and even a provocateur for his own views of the racial conflict.

Snob Dixy

I can't help but wonder if we've come to be nothing but a joke to the governor of the state of Washington. I can understand a statesman not being able to attend an official function between two neighboring cities, but when the cities happen to be in two neighboring countries and our lieutenant governor ends up not hosting an appointed official representative of the Washington government, but Dixy Lee Ray's sister and an off duty security agent who came along for the ride, I consider it a gross insult not only to our beautiful city but to all Canadians.

I don't think I'll ever understand the complacent attitude of our elected representatives, as they take these obvious snubs with a shrug of the shoulders. It makes it harder to stand up with pride and say "I am a Canadian".—R. L. Glover, Victoria.

NDP Conservative

The recent B.C. NDP convention reinforces the conclusion that this country's social democrats are little more than a radical conservative movement.

If the goal of the CCF-NDP had ever been a system where all people consciously control their social affairs then their periodical conclaves would never see ". . . such a smooth manipulation of a convention . . ." by the party brass, to use the approving description of a rightist news columnist.

The methods of a political organization usually reflect its objective. And the objective of the NDP is to tinker with, but to leave intact, the present hierarchical society of haves and have-nots. This priority demands a party structure of leaders and followers, of those "who know" versus the rank and filers.

When members of the deprived majority, such as some NDP convention delegates, think freedom is the right to demonstrate against social evils instead of possession of the knowledge to abolish them, they are trapped in a web of political ignorance. When they are captured by a parochial inference that democracy has been served when they are subdued by "their own" RCMP but not if censured by "foreign" Pinkerton guards, they are prime sheep for any glib shepherd. If many of the 50,000 workers ordered back to the treadmill in 1975 by former premier and grand strike-breaker Dave Barrett had ignored his dictum, some equal authoritarianism of the violent kind could have been witnessed.

Ah yes. Protecting the innocent. — J. G. Jenkins, 1090 Lodge Ave.

Advocates Evil

In regard to the closure of the Community Action Group. It appears from available sources, that they are being cancelled because they are an "advocacy group". This gives me the impression that being an advocate is an evil or sordid representative. Webster's Dictionary, however, states that advocates are:

1. One that pleads the cause of another (i.e., a lawyer, social worker, etc.)
2. One that defends or maintains a cause or proposal (i.e., yourself)

On this basis, advocates are a vital and necessary aspect of our society. Just as Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm represents the government that is in power, so does CAG represent the people that the government is empowered to care for!! Why then, is it permissible for Vander Zalm to be an advocate and not the people of this province?—Dawn Rouzault, 132 Menzies Street.

Private Vaults

Canadian government alliance with the International Monetary Fund is unadulterated treason. It defies the Constitution, and ignores the oaths of office taken by members of parliament.

The IMF, and it's coterie of affiliates such as the world federalists, the Trilateralists, the Club the Rome, the U.S. Federal Reserve, the Bank of Germany, the Bank of Japan, the Bank of England, and the Canadian Bankers' Association, is but one huge, private cabal.

The voting shares of this camarilla are held by Rockefeller and Rothschild as a concomitant involvement as the controlling omnipotents. Non-voting shares are held by all others. The voting shares are held for private gain: The non-voting shares are held by the 130 countries which have been beguiled into patronizing this fraudulent organization. The many persons in apparent prominent and prestige positions are but pharisees rewarded for carrying out their assigned roles in this outrageous conspiracy.

The voting shareholders hold the right, without equivocation or recourse, to determine, manipulate, grant, or withhold exchange, values and credits. And to hold these over the non-voting members as cudgels of control. They can increase or decrease purchasing power for their own private gain against others, and expand or contract credit, at their whim. The object, and benefit of their actions is always to siphon off wealth into their own private vaults.

To assign Canadian wealth and productivity, which are assets of tangible value, in exchange for loss on control, and spurious IMF paper and bookkeeping credits which are of no trinsic value whatsoever, and which will be debased as to purchasing power for Canada, at home and abroad, is monumental perfidity.

That a Canadian government would fail to heed the lessons of history, and fall into a well-worn trap, by sponsoring a bill which advocates, and raitifies such treachery whereby to meekly sell out Canada, and the rights, protections and holdings of the nation the provinces, and the people in trade for "nothing" is execrable, and unconscionable beyond belief. —F. Fred Kirkman, 521 Normandy Road.

It's Always The Other Guy Who Drinks Too Much

By GERARD BONNOT

(Atlas World Press Review adapted Bonnot's article from the Paris weekly L'Express)

Over a period of five years two doctors of the Raymond-Poincare Hospital in Garches, Claude Got and Christian Thomas, meticulously studied 328 fatal auto accidents that had occurred in Paris and five surrounding departments. They found that 38 per cent of the drivers who were responsible for 41 per cent of the fatalities were under the influence of alcohol. This is far higher than the official figure of 12 per cent for the entire country. "Unfortunately," Dr. Got said, "when fatal accidents occur the blood alcohol level of victims is rarely measured."

The French have a well-established reputation as big drinkers. The country has the world's highest mortality rate for cirrhosis of the liver and the highest hospital admissions rate for delirium tremens. A High Commission for Studies and Information on Alcohol established in 1954 by President Pierre Mendes-France set stringent norms for alcohol consumption: not more than a pint of wine a day for a housewife or a sedentary worker, a pint and a half for a manual laborer.

If these limits are not exceeded, doctors agree, alcohol can do no harm. One does not become drunk, there is no addiction, the organism remains healthy, and the mild euphoria accompanying a modest use of alcohol can be beneficial. Surprisingly 53 million Frenchmen seem to come close to following the High Commission's recommendations since their total consumption, measured in pure alcohol, is close to the quantities specified.

Who then fills those hospital beds and psychiatric wards? Who drives with an alcohol-fogged head? Who, in fact, drinks too much? "It's the others of course," said Michelle de Vulpian, Director of Cofremca studies, a private polling agency which recently published a survey of drinking in France.

She cited as misleading the typical picture of the alcoholic as a wreck and a monster. His hands are shaking, he loses his memory, can't hold a job, beats his wife, leaves his children penniless, and is doomed to a wretched end. Or he will undergo detoxification and must remain on guard for the rest of his life, forever branded an alcoholic.

The new alcoholic, Mme. de Vulpian points out, in no way identifies with this stereotype. Since he never appears drunk he does not consider himself an alcoholic. "The big drinkers we interviewed know their capacity," she said. "When they start feeling tipsy at a party they stop drinking for a while but start again a little later when they think they are in control."

Drinkers set a limit for themselves far beyond the High Commission's norm. In effect they are playing a psychological game: one must prove oneself not to be alcohol's slave. Thus one decides, for instance, never to drink before a given hour, or never to drink alone, or never to drink red wine except at meals, and to eschew hard liquor altogether. The biggest worriers may even stop drinking for several days or weeks to assure themselves they can do without it.

"Their chief characteristic," she said, "is that every occasion is an excuse for drinking: they drink when they are happy to celebrate; when they are sad to cheer up; to get going at work in the morning; and as a reward for having worked hard. They drink because they are overworked, have too many responsibilities, or because they don't have enough to do. They drink year 'round to relax and on their vacations to have more fun.

"They drink because they are lonely or when they are in a group to break the ice. They even wind up drinking to forget that they drink too much. The mere mention of alcohol triggers the reflex."

Once the benign effect of alcohol has been discovered its use continues. And since alcohol is a drug the organism adapts to it and increased doses are needed to achieve the same effect. A radical difference between alcohol and illicit drugs like heroin and hashish or even tobacco is in social attitudes. Alcohol in France does not shock anyone; its use is even encouraged. One is proud to be a connoisseur. An accomplished drinker is an epicure.

In sum, the French are not a nation of alcoholics but alcohol is the national drug. What strategies should now be followed in the battle against alcoholism? "It does no good to arouse guilt feelings in the problem drinker," Mme. de Vulpian said. "He already feels guilty, terribly so. Reinforcing that guilt will only lead to more drinking in order to escape."

In the course of her inquiry she met people who had stopped drinking spontaneously not out of repentence or shame but because they were losing their treasured self-image. Sometimes this motive can seem ludicrous. Like the man who wanted to look young on the beach in his swimming trunks: "You see, I had two enormous tires around my waist — one I called Black and White and the other Johnny Walker."

Lougheed Strangely Quiet on Big Issues

By GEOFFREY STEVENS
The Globe and Mail

LOUGHEED . . . off on grand tour

There are a couple of puzzling things about the performance of Peter Lougheed, the Conservative Premier of Alberta. One concerns Quebec, the other the Berger Report and the construction of an Arctic pipeline.

On the plane out to Edmonton the other day, a Conservative MP from Alberta had a suggestion. "If you get a chance," he said, "why don't you ask Peter Lougheed why he has been so silent on national unity?"

Why not?

Since the Quebec election last November 15, the leaders of most of the English-speaking provinces have had a good deal to say about their concen about the state of Confederation and the future of the country. But it's almost as though the news of the election of a separatist government had failed to reach Edmonton.

One might have expected Premier Lougheed to be a leading voice in the national debate. As premier, for nearly six years, of what he calls the "only growth province in Canada" and as leader of a Tory party which commands 69 of the legislature's 75 seats, he is in a position to speak out forcefully. But he hasn't.

So why has he been so silent?

Not surprisingly, Mr. Lougheed does not admit to having been silent. In an interview last week, he said he made national unity the theme of his address to the Alberta Conservative Conference in March (the final four pages of the 23-page text dealt with the subject.) He also noted that he had endorsed the statement issued by the Western premiers, at their meeting in Brandon on May 5, which rejected both the status quo and an economic association with an independent Quebec, calling instead (but without specifics) for a reshaping of Confederation to recognize the need for strong provinces.

If there were more he could usefully do, Mr. Lougheed said, he would do it. If there were practical ways Alberta could have a positive impact on national unity, he would be open to them. What about upgrading and extending education for Franco-Albertans and providing more French instruction in the English school system? Mr. Lougheed said he didn't feel his record had been "all that bad," although he acknowledged that more could be done. "But we shouldn't fool ourselves that anything we could do would have that much effect on a referendum in Quebec."

Talking to Premier Lougheed, one has the impression he is becoming something of a Prairie isolationist. He seems to reflect a sense of remoteness that exists in Western Canada, a sense that Quebec is essentially a Central Canadian problem. Newly prosperous Alberta is turning inward and the premier, an astute politician, knows that making the "right" noises about Quebec would not be particularly popular.

'No Difference'

If Mr. Lougheed's relative silence on national unity seems odd, his silence on an Arctic pipeline seems downright strange. The decision to build a pipeline (and the route chosen) or not to build a pipeline would Affect Alberta, with its dwindling petroleum reserves and its petrochemical hopes, more directly and deeply than any other province. Yet the premier insists he has no position on the pipeline. The decision, he maintains, won't make that much difference to Alberta's economic contingency plans.

If the Alcan route is chosen, it would (because the pipeline would carry only U.S. gas for U.S. customers) cause capital to move back into Alberta to finance exploration for additional conventional reserves. If the Mackenzie pipeline is built, it would make Alberta the supply and logistics base for the construction work. If no pipeline is built, it would cause more money to move into the tar sands and other high-cost projects to develop unconventional energy resources.

But surely Alberta must have a preference? No, says Mr. Lougheed. The decision is entirely within federal jurisdiction and, as a premier who has frequently complained about federal responsibility, he is not about to invade a federal jurisdiction. This statement sounds distinctly out of place, coming from a provincial premier who is about to embark on a five-week tour to the Soviet Union, the oil countries of the Middle East and Geneva — a tour that will take him deeply into areas of federal jurisdiction, including long-term wheat agreements, world energy pricing and trade and tariff policies. It sounded so out of place that Premier Lougheed allowed himself a small grin as he said it.

What do you suppose would happen if Rene Levesque embarked on a five-week tour with official visits to the Soviet Union (to talk about long-term contracts), to Iraq, Saudi Arabia and Iran (to discuss oil pricing) and to Israel — then went on to Geneva to promote his government's trade and tariff policies?

You know what would happen. The entire Department of External Affairs would succumb to cardiac arrest. Joe Clark would declare that — subject to reversal by his caucus or by the next person to whom he chanced to talk — he didn't think much of the notion of premiers pretending to be prime ministers. Pierre Trudeau would suddenly discover that, by coincidence, he would be visiting the same places as Mr. Levesque and that he had been assured longer red carpets, more lavish state dinners and better wines.

Mr. Lougheed's tour, which started May 28 and ends July 1, is probably the most ambitious foreign excursion ever undertaken by a provincial leader. It is quite different from his earlier tours to Europe, Japan and the United States. Those were essentially to promote trade. This one is partly a fact-finding mission and partly an attempt to make it known abroad that Alberta's interests are not necessarily the same as those pursued by the national government.

In interviews last week both Premier Lougheed and his Minister of Inter-Governmental Affairs, Lou Hyndman, stressed that the trip had been arranged in close consultation with External Affairs.

Soviet Market

Mr. Lougheed's chief interest in the Soviet Union — he will visit Moscow, Minsk and Leningrad — will be agriculture. Alberta produces 32 per cent of Canada's grain and he feels the Soviet market is threatened by a five-year agreement signed last fall by the United States and Soviet Union under which the Soviets agreed to purchase a minimum of 6 million tons of U.S. grain per year. The premier would like to see a similar long-term deal between Canada and the Soviet Union. "The Canadian Wheat Board (a federal agency) seems to feel we do not need a long-term contract with the Soviet Union," Mr. Lougheed said. "We (Alberta) can't make any special grain agreement with the Soviet Union, but we will make public proposals to the federal government for a change in policy."

In Iraq, Saudi Arabia and Iran, Mr. Lougheed will try to assess the future of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC), whether it will hold together or fall apart, and how its future supply and pricing policies may affect energy policies in Alberta.

Open Dry area

In Israel, Mr. Lougheed wants to examine advances in irrigation and water management to see if Israeli techniques could be used in Alberta to open the dry area south of Lethbridge for the production of specialty crops.

The Geneva portion of the trip is apt to be the most controversial. The 12-member Alberta group will confer not only with the Canadian delegation to the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT) negotiations, but informally with the delegations of the United states, Japan and the European Economic Community. The premier said he feels Western Canada has not gotten a fair deal in the GATT negotiations to date. "I'm concerned about the strategy of the Canadian delegation to GATT." Mr. Lougheed doesn't like the sector-by-sector approach to the Canadian delegation and feels the delegation is giving too much priority to nonferrous metals and pulp and paper, and not enough to items which affect the economy of the West — agricultural produce, livestock and above all, in Alberta's case, petrochemicals. Premier Lougheed is anxious to secure tariff changes that would enable Alberta petrochemicals to compete in the U.S. Pacific Northwest market.

All this may seem like a direct provincial intrusion into international trade, an area of exclusive federal jurisdiction, but the Alberta government doesn't see it that way. As Mr. Hyndman, the Inter-Government Affairs Minister, put it: "It may be untraditional in terms of what provinces have done in Confederation, but we do not see anything improper in it." But what if Quebec tried it? "Rene Levesque," said Mr. Hyndman, "touches different nerve ends."

Tinkering With People

russell baker

Until a few years ago, people just happened. As a result, most of them were hodgepodges, like London and Rome, which also just happened.

Occasionally you might run into somebody who had been planned, like Washington, D.C. These planned people were the products of Planned Parenthood. Their parents had sat down with architects. The architects had shown them blueprints of beautiful families in which all the siblings would be as neatly spaced as the oaks on a Washington boulevard.

Later, when the siblings were all precisely spaced in their assigned spots on the calendar, they were very much like people who had just happened, except for a tendency to think of themselves as siblings. Where the old kings had hated their brothers and sisters as rivals for the throne and hired thugs to dispose of them, these people hired psychologists to dispel their sibling rivalries.

As a result, Erica Jong replaced William Shakespeare as the chronicler of humanity's foibles. Otherwise, the emergence of planned people had little effect. Now, however, family architecture has become fancier. For $40 a couple planning a person can buy a Gender Selection Kit which — its marketers assert — makes it possible for parents to assign the sex of their choice to their little production. It is hard to guess what the upshot of this will be. Historically, men have decided what kind of car the family would have and women have had the last word on sofas and refrigerators. How will it go when they sit down to decide whether the person on the drawingboard will be male or female?

A feminist tells me that male ego will prevail, that the country will end up with a vast surplus of men, and women will be in huge demand. I don't know. My guess is that a lot of productions will never get off the drawing board on account of the planners deciding to get divorced rather than go on fighting about whether they ought to create a man or a woman.

In view of children's natural disposition to frustrate parents, we can also look for a big boom in sex-change surgery, particularly during the adolescent years of the planned generation. Nowadays a young man who hates his family's insistence that he go to college and become a lawyer has to drop out of school and become a tanner. In the future he will be able to send the old folks up the way by going to Johns Hopkins and becoming a woman.

It would be interesting to know what it feels like to be a fully planned person. Having your sex determined by your parents, of course, is surely only a primitive beginning on the intricate architecture which biology will make possible in another generation or so. Before the century is out, science will probably enable parents to decide not only what size and shape their productions will take, but also how bright they will be and what careers they will pursue.

Most people will probably go for very smart, mildly acquisitive doctors and lawyers. Economically, this could lead to a well balanced nation, with the lawyers suing the doctors for outrageous sums and the doctors recovering their losses by charging the lawyers fees which, they know all too well, the traffic can bear.

If we could anticipate a perfectly closed economy, with the money circling from doctors to lawyers and back again, the country would be too occupied with suing and suturing to be subject to the fits of unhappiness it now suffers. Unfortunately, there is always somebody who rocks the boat to Paradise.

Imagine, for example, a man who has been totally planned by a pair of parents who think they have a great sense of humor. He had come off the blueprint to their exact specifications and is the complete fulfillment of their dream to play a good joke on the world. As a result, he is not very bright, has no talent for either courtroom or hospital, and not much interest in anything else.

If you are in this pickle nowadays — as most people are — there's not much to do about it but blame God or fate. In the new dispensation, parents will have replaced these invulnerable objects of man's disenchantment.

I think the person in this example is going to make a very loud fuss about parents being to blame for the mess the world is in. And I think a lot of lawyers who are suing doctors 18 hours a day, and a lot of doctors who are extracting lawyers' gall bladders until midnight, are going to start listening to him, and that the lawyers are going to start asking why they have to stand around in musty old courtrooms all their lives, and the doctors are going to start asking why they have to spend their lives up to the elbows in iodine, and that everybody is going to say, "It's parents who made this mess."

Many persons say this now, of course, but without real conviction, knowing the joker is really God or fate or something equally impervious to a kick in the pants. When parents become God or fate, they will get to know what angry is.

Pipeline Stocks In Lead on TSE

The TSE 300 index, spurred by a seven-point advance at New York, was up 2.89 to 984.13 with gains in all four of its most heavily-weighted groups.

Metals and minerals rose 3.80 to 1,034.23, financial services 2.98 to 863.59, oil and gas issues 1.15 to 1,084.69 and industrial products .56 to 893.24.

Management companies and pipeline and utility stocks led the seven gainers among the other 10 groups, while gold and communications and media issues declined. Transportation stocks were unchanged.

Volume of trading by 2 p.m. totalled 1.41 million shares compared with 1.54 million at the same time Thursday.

Among industrials, Brascan Ltd. A gained ¾ to $13⅛, Inco A ½ to $27⅞, Trans Mountain Pipe Line A ½ to $11½, Bell Canada ½ to $51¾ and Trans-Canada PipeLines ⅛ to $15⅛.

The Labor Department reported this morning that the wholesale price index rose 0.4 per cent in May for its smallest rise in nine months, while the unemployment rate declined to a 2½-year low of 6.9 per cent.

At the same time, New York's Citibank held its prime lending rate at 6¾ per cent.

New York

At New York the stock market responded to some favorable news on inflation and interest rates with a broad rally.

The 2 p.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 7.38 at 910.53.

Gainers outpaced losers by better than a 2-to-1 margin among New York Stock Exchange-listed issues.

The pace of trading remained sluggish, however. NYSE volume totalled 13.30 million shares as of mid-afternoon.

Montreal

At Montreal prices were fixed in moderate afternoon trading.

Volume at 2:30 p.m. EDT was 332,900 shares, compared with 290,800 shares traded up to the same time Thursday.

Norcen Energy Resources was off ¼ at $11, Toronto-Dominion Bank ⅛ at $16¼, Seagram Ltd. ⅛ at $21 and Simpson's Ltd. five cents at $4.85. Bell Canada gained ½ at $51¾, Brascan A ⅝ at $13⅛, Westburne International Industries ¼ at $9¾ and Oshawa A 20 cents at $4.95.

London

LONDON (CP) — The London stock market rose moderate Friday near the close of very light trading caused by the upcoming long weekend. Markets will be closed Monday for the Whitsun holiday.

Canadian stocks were unchanged to fractionally lower.

CHICAGO (AP) — Old crop commodity futures in the soybean complex came up against renewed selling pressure on the Board of Trade today as new crop deliveries were being bought.

The trading maneuver, termed spreading or straddling, caused a relatively wide divergence in prices in the complex. Old crop soybeans were down nine cents a bushel while new crop were up 13; the nearby meal was down five dollars a ton and the new crop deliveries were up as much as five dollars.

Old crop oil was about 20 points lower and the new crop 25 or so higher.

Grain prices were steady to about three cents a bushel higher in very slow trade. Iced broilers were narrowly mixed and trade was dull.

The selling of nearby contracts in the complex was, in part, a continuation from Thursday. However, the trade also appeared to react to some disappointing statistics issued overnight. The amount of soybeans processed in the week ended June 1 for meal and oil was lower than the previous week and sharply lower than a year ago.

Demand for corn, wheat and oats futures was led by commercial interests with commission houses on both sides.

Changes in Company Act 'Benefit to Foreigners'

OTTAWA (CP) — Foreign shareholders could benefit more than Canadian consumers or workers from new competition legislation that would allow companies to form monopolies if they could prove increased efficiency, a Liberal MP said Thursday.

Herb Gray (Windsor West) said the special tribunal to be set up to review such mergers should be required to consider where the benefits of increased efficiency are distributed.

The extra profits could be passed on to workers, to consumers, to shareholders or a combination, Gray told the Commons finance committee, now studying the bill.

He said passing on the extra profits to shareholders is not wrong in some cases. But since so much Canadian industry is foreign-owned, this could mean the profits would go out of the country.

Consumer Affairs Minister Tony Abbott, appearing before the committee with department officials to answer questions about the bill, said the increased efficiency might be needed in some cases for survival of the company.

Gray's comment was similar to one made earlier by the Consumers Association of Canada which questioned why the distribution of extra profits wasn't to be considered.

The competition bill, phase two of amendments to the Combines Investigation Act, would set up a competition board to review mergers between companies with the potential power to dominate the marketplace and eliminate competition.

But it would allow mergers between giants if they could prove they would be more efficient. The tribunal would in some cases tie approval of a merger to a lowering of protective tariffs.

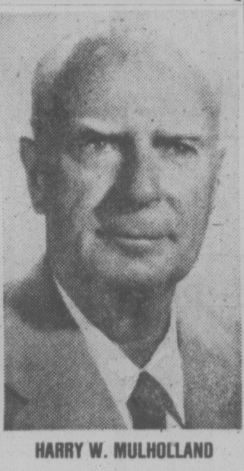
In theory, lowering tariffs would make Canadian industry more competitive with world prices.

Federal economists argue this increased efficiency would make domestic companies more competitive in foreign markets and stimulate exports.

The legislation would also permit two competitors to agree that each stop producing a certain article in a trade-off, one article for another article. The competitors would agree to purchase exclusively from one another the articles that are subject to the agreement.

Robert Bertrand, head of the department's bureau of competition policy, responsible for enforcement of the act, said he expects electronic, pulp and paper, chemical and textile industries would be able to benefit from specialization agreements.

CANADIAN SCHENLEY DISTILLERIES LTD. APPOINTMENT



HARRY W. MULHOLLAND

The appointment of Mr. Harry W. Mulholland as Director for British Columbia and the Yukon, for Canadian Schenley Distilleries Ltd., is announced by Donald W. McNaughton, President and Chief Executive Officer.

Mr. Mulholland, a long time resident of British Columbia, is a former President of Western Canada Breweries Ltd., is currently a Director of a number of B.C. firms and is a Past-President of the Pacific National Exhibition.

Mr. Mullholland replaces Mr. G. M. McKeown who has served as Director for 2 years and has regretfully resigned for health reasons. ***

Depression Cycle Starting—Expert

CALGARY (CP) — North America and western Europe are heading into a depression, Geoffrey Barraclough, a University of Oxford history professor, warns.

He told a University of Calgary social policy workshop that "in my view the recession has not bottomed out. We have not yet reached the phase of depression."

He added that recovery and prosperity are still a long way off.

Parradough said he based his predictions on the apparent cyclical nature of economics.

"We have experienced three full cycles (since 1780) and we now are half-way through a fourth cycle."

The recovery and prosperity which began in 1947 appears to be sliding down into the recession and depression which have followed such periods in the past, he said.

Barraclough said the coming depression will have worldwide implications and if the past is any indication, the slump "will fracture the existing system and spill over into the political and social spheres."

In this context, western society probably will experience a "traumatic" transformation in its values and structures which might lead to a better way of life or might end in a destructive war.

Canadian Oil Price Warning

TORONTO (CP) — Sometime in the future, oil prices in Canada may rise to higher than world levels, Ross A. Hennigar president of Sun Oil Co. Ltd., predicts.

Hennigar told the annual convention of the Retail Council of Canada that industry profits will have to rise significantly if enough supplies are to be developed to make Canada self-reliant in energy.

"That means that the price of oil must rise and furthermore, that it must be maintained at a high enough level to sustain continuing exploration and development and, at the same time, to encourage conservation," he said.

"This could mean that at some future time oil prices in Canada may be higher than world levels."

Western Mines

Western Mines Ltd. has signed an agreement with Philipp Bros. (Canada) Ltd. whereby Philipp can earn a 10-per-cent working interest in the Great Slave reef property which Western is exploring in partnership with Dupont of Canada Exploration. Under the terms of the agreement, Philipp must spend at least $1.5 million. Philipp, a division of the major United States metals group, Engelhard Minerals and Chemicals Corp., will pay 60 to 70 per cent of Western's exploration expenditures on the project during the next four years.

Exports Top Imports

Exports during the month were valued at $3.777 billion, while imports were estimated at $3.628 billion.

Sales abroad registered a five-per-cent decline from the previous month when Canada established a record monthly surplus in merchandise trade of $562 million on total sales of $3.990 billion.

Imports during April were four per cent higher than in March.

You are blessed with a quick mind and a facility with this spoken word. Your dual personality contains many contradictions. Although you need much rest to re-charge your energetic batteries insomnia frequently denies you that opportunity. Like John F. CARS RUNNING DOWN GEESE

VANCOUVER (CP) — The staff at Stanley Park say they go to great pains each years looking after nests for Canada geese, controlling dogs and people to protect the birds at Lost Lagoon, but feel that lately, cars have been getting away with murder.

Allison LaCarte, of West Vancouver says every day she sees geese getting hit by cars. She also is concerned that motorists attempting to avoid the birds will cause traffic accidents.

The Lions Gate Bridge patrol, the park board, the Animal Defence Society of British Columbia and the SPCA all agree that there is a problem but no one has a solution, LaCarte says.

Larry Lesage, Stanley Park zoo curator, said Thursday that most of the geese killed meet their fate during the morning rush hour, adding although only a few are killed, even that is too many.

$40,000 Study Set On Nelson Heritage

NELSON (CP) — Recreation and Conservation Minister Sam Bawlf says his staff is undertaking a $40,000 study to assess this town on the west arm of Kootenay Lake as a potential Heritage conservation site.

Bawlf said Thursday the study will identify buildings which contribute to Nelson's historic character and will propose ways of preserving them.

The minister said a strategy for preserving and enhancing Nelson's historic character "could be the cornerstone of future economic and social growth for this community."

The rate of unemployment in the Kootenays is about 20 per cent and the government is hoping to stimulate employment as well as preserve history through this plan, Bawlf said.

He added that the Nelson study would be a pilot project for other studies planned for the Kootenays and the rest of the province.

It's Done with Mirrors

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dr. Felix Trombe, a French solar energy expert, said Thursday that in 40 years, British Columbia's total energy needs could be supplied by several solar energy plants in the Rocky Mountains.

The province's coast is too rainy to support a sun-based heating method, but nearby mountainous areas could provide the high-sunshine microclimate which makes solar energy possible, Trombe said in an interview.

For now, the feasibility of solar heating for the average home is plagued by economic problems, he said. Government incentives and heavy subsidization are necessary to make solar heating attractive to homeowners.

Programs such a President Carter's plan to install solar heating devices in 2.5 million American homes by 1985 must be increasingly copied by Canada and other countries if solar energy is to fulfill its promise as a safe, inexpensive and inexhaustible energy source, he added.

Trombe, here for the sixth Canadian Congress of Applied Mechanics, is conducting research into the use of solar energy for power generation at laboratories in Odeillo, France.

As many as 1,500 mirrors are arranged to reflect and focus sunlight into the boiler's cavity, which produces steam at full pressure after reaching temperatures of 1,000 degrees Celsius. The boiler then can be used in the usual way to run conventional turbines to generate electricity.

PINCHER PROBATION

VANCOUVER (CP) — Achille Saccone was given a one-year suspended sentence and probation Thursday for pinching women's bottoms on B.C. Hydro buses.

Judge Kerry Smith told the 29-year-old Italian immigrant in provincial court that his behaviour was unacceptable but that the indecent assault he was convicted of May 12 was "at the low end of the scale."

Ginter Brewery Forging Ahead

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Industrialist Ben Ginter said Thursday his local brewery may be back in full operation by July.

"Orders are increasing daily and if this keeps up we will be back on full-time operation by July 1," he said.

The plant is currently bottling beer for export to California.

POLICEMAN'S TRIAL DROPPED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Federal Court of Canada ordered Thursday that an extradition hearing of a former Hong Kong detective be stopped.

Hon Kwing Shum, 55, now living in Vancouver, is charged under the Hong Kong bribery ordinance with being in control of more than $2.3 million Hong Kong, which was far out of line with his salary as a detective. The amount is worth about $450,000 Canadian.

ONLY 30 BRIEFS ON BILL ONE

QUEBEC CITY (UPI) — With less than a week to go before the opening of public hearings on Quebec's French language charter, government spokesmen said Thursday only 30 briefs have been submitted.

Three years ago, there were 185 briefs submitted in hearings on Bill 22, which will be replaced by the Parti Quebecois' Bill 1, to be tabled in the provincial legislature June 24.

The government has received 137 notices of intent to present briefs, the official said.

Ill-will over Bill 22 is said to have contributed to the defeat of the Liberals by the PQ in last November's provincial election.

Who will appear first before the legislature's education committee when it begins clause-by-clause study of the bill Tuesday has not yet been decided, a spokesman for Cultural Affairs Minister Dr. Camille Laurin said.

Minimum Wage In Quebec Rises

QUEBEC (CP) — Quebec workers will enjoy the highest minimum wage in Canada as of July 1, under a decision to tie the minimum wage to the average industrial wage every six months, Labor Minister Jacques Couture announced Thursday.

The July increase will bring the minimum hourly rate to $3.15 from the current $3.

At present, British Columbia shares the highest minimum hourly wage of $3 with Quebec. The decision to fix the minimum wage at 50.4 per cent of the average industrial wage each Jan. 1 and July 1 was reached Wednesday by the provicial cabinet on Couture's recommendation.

Couture said the new rates will not apply until Jan. 1 to workers in hotels and restaurants, whose pay is augmented by tips.

The new minimum wage policy will be included in regulations of a forthcoming bill setting minimum working conditions for all Quebec workers.

Starting Out?

FACT: There is ample mortgage funding available at very low interest rates.

FACT: A good realtor will take the time to show you the various financing arrangements available, what you can afford, and what it will cost.

FACT: Market conditions being what they are, you can now probably purchase your own home for very little down, and little more than you now pay in rent.

Bachelor Father Sees No Trouble

OTTAWA (UPI) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thurday he thinks he'll be successful as a bachelor father but has no plans to leave politics in order to take care of his three sons.

He also called his estranged wife Margaret, "a fine person" who was being exploited by some reporters.

Trudeau was asked at his weekly press confrence if the task of being a lone parent might force him to consider leaving politics to spend more time with Justin, 5, Sacha, 3, and Michel, 1.

Trudeau said: "As of yet, it (the separation) is still a new arrangement. I've been able to spend a fair amount of time with my children and I hope to increase that time by cutting out on other things.

"But it certainly has not led me in any way to think I might cut out on my present occupation. I suppose I am one of many single parents who have to work and look after their children at the same time and I don't see why I would not be as able as anyone else to do it."

The 57-year-old Trudeau said also that statements attributed to his 28-year-old wife since their separation were "fabrication."

"I feel in fairness to Margaret I should inform you that she has given no interviews since our separation statements. She has remained as silent as I have.

"Therefore all this spate of stories that have been built on some alleged interview that she would have given since her press conference wer unfortunately fabrication."

Charles' Session Scrapped

NEW YORK (UPI) — Because of publicity about her recent separation, Margaret Trudeau has been forced to cancel a business trip to London this week for a photo session with Prince Charles. "The publicity was so great we decided not to send her," said Woody Fraser, producer of ABC-TV's Good Morning America show, which plans a feature by Mrs. Trudeau on Queen Elizabeth's Silver Jubilee.

Even though Thursday's photo session with the Prince of Wales was scrapped, Fraser said, Mrs. Trudeau will appear on the show next Wednesday to present her portfolio from Fidel Castro to prizefighter Duane Bobick.

He said she may even be offered a full-time job.

PM Cautious on Quebec Talks

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau said Thursday he was willing to negotiate a new power-sharing arrangement with Quebec but any major constitutional changes would have to be approved by the other nine provinces.

The other nine provinces would also be offered any new rights accorded Quebec, he said.

Trudeau rejected a proposal that he go to Quebec to meet face-to-face with Premier Levesque to settle their differences so that Quebec would remain in Canada.

"I think that is a naive suggestion," he said.

He doubted that anything would come out of such a meeting and pictured the press waiting outside the door of the room where they were talking.

"I know what would happen. You would be there with your mikes and when we emerged you would say: 'What have you settled?' And when we replied the talks were only in the initial stages, you would dismiss it as a "failure."

BOYCOTT BOTHER

OTTAWA (UPI) — Prime Minister Trudeau says he expects a way will be found at next week's Commonwealth Conference to avoid an African boycott that threatens the 1978 Commonwealth Games at Edmondon.

Trudeau said Thursday he might question the usefulness of the Commonwealth if it failed to solve the "simple" problem threatening the cancellation of the Games.

Canada hopes an African boycott can be avoided if the Commonwealth leaders agree to a condemnation of apartheid.

Davis Raps DREE Attitude

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government's regional development approach is "economic defeatism" which levels down rather than builds up, B.C. Transportation Minister Jack Davis charged Thursday.

It doesn't get at the root of the regional disparity problem, he said and "it often makes it worse."

Ottawa is most concerned with propping up those parts of Canada in which unemployment is highest, Davis said.

"It is not an aggressive, regional development approach," he said. "It is a defensive hold-the-line approach."

Davis made the remarks in speech to a transportation conference sponsored by the Conference Board in Canada.

Canada's economic advisors are to blame, he said, because "they are forgetting to be economists."

"Today they are part social worker, part politician. They want to please people. They don't want to disturb them. They feel they have to leave them where they are."

Federal department of regional economic expansion money is poured into Newfoundland, the Maritimes, northern and eastern Quebec, while southern Ontario, Alberta and B.C. are left out in the cold, Davis said.

"Is success bad and failure the key to the treasury in Ottawa? It certainly looks like it from here."

The Economic Council of Canada must share part of the blame, he said, because it is "too pliable. It takes the federal government admonitions to prop up eastern Canada far too seriously."

Davis told the conference he generally favors the "user pay" approach in transportation matters and said subsidies and distortions designed to foster economic advance in selected areas of the province are mostly to no avail because transportation plays such a small part in total manufacturing costs.

He said he was opposed to the recommendation of the recent Hall Commission report on grain handling and transportation that the federal government pay losses incurred by railways in transporting export grains at artifically depressed rates.

SWAMPED WON'T SUE PATRICIA

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Greenpeace Foundation will not press legal action against the coastal cruise ship Princess Patricia in connection with the swamping of a small rubber boat during a demonstration May 13, foundation president Patrick Moore said Thursday.

Moore said a case concerning "the technicalities of the seamanship of the Patricia's skipper wouldn't have addressed the issue of opposition to the Kitimat pipeline and tanker route proposal or furthered that cause."

No one was seriously injured in the incident.

Child Laws Reviewed

B.C.'s child welfare superintendent has dropped his regular duties to take a look at children's legislation.

Victor Belknap said in an interview that he has started a review of existing provincial laws governing children and would present the cabinet with recommendations for new legislation.

Belknap said the review, started last month, would be completed by December. Meanwhile, the human resources ministry's deputy superintendents have assumed his administrative duties.

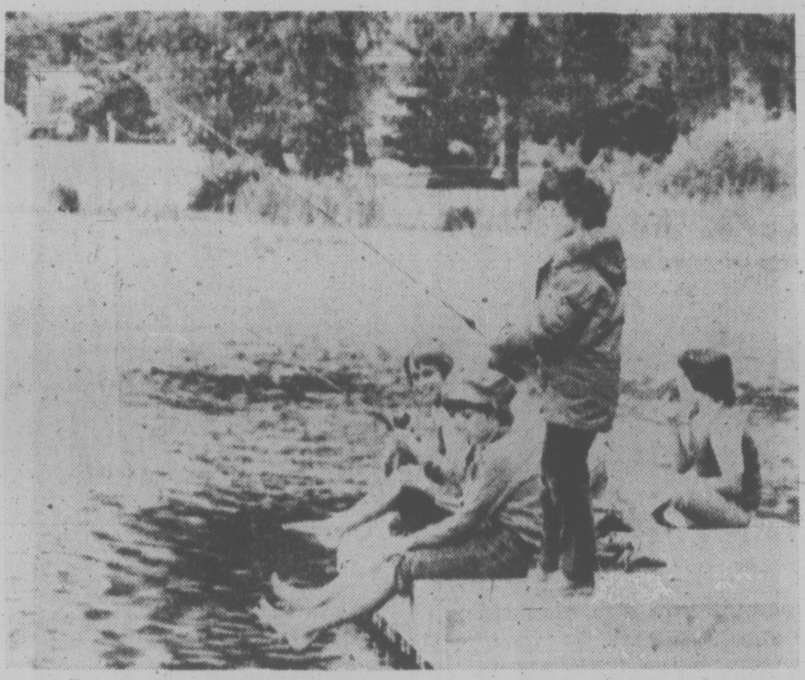
"I've been in a kind of storm centre and know a good deal about what happens to kids and what shouldn't happen to them," Belknap said. He was superintendent for 10 years and department staff member for another 15.

Belknap said he would study the Protection of Children Act enacted more than 70 years ago, the Adoption Act and the Children of Unmarried Parents Act.

The superintendent would also examine a report filed two years ago by Mr. Justice Tom Berger on family and children's law after a royal commission was called.

The commission mainly reported public opinion, Belknap said. His plan was to map out new laws and pressure the government to take action.

He indicated that inaction on the commission's recommendations prompted his own review.



WHO CARES if the fish aren't biting, when the sun is warm, water tingles the toes, and school will be out in less than a month. These Coquitlam boys dropped their lines in Camo Lake in preparation for the serious fishing days of summer.

Principal Wins Job

NELSON (CP) — The boycott of schools in South Slocan, 15 miles west of here, has ended with the reversal of a school board decision to demote principal Alex Pereverzoff.

Most of the 200 children who had missed classes since the boycott began May 18 were back at their schools Thursday, and parents said everyone would be back today.

School board officials would say only that the continuing serious situation forced them to change their minds Wednesday.

"It's been a threatening situation," board chairman Donna Graychick said Thursday. "The people have obviously rebelled. I think it's gone far enough.

"If they indeed want Mr. Pereverzoff, that's the one they get. Somebody had to come to a compromise and obviously it was not going to be them."

Unfair Advantages Cut For Landlords, Tenants

VANCOUVER (CP) — Unfair advantages to either landlords or tenants would be wiped out under legislative revisions to the Landlord and Tenant Act, rentalsman Barrie Clark said Thursday.

"I haven't seen the draft legislation," Clark said in an interview, "but I think it'll be a good bill.

"I've made some recommendations and to the best of my knowledge they will be part of the new bill."

Consuner Affairs Minister Rafe Mair said Tuesday in Victoria the legislative revisions to the act, to be introduced at the legislative session which begins June 13, would eliminate rent controls in some British Columbia areas and would make the landlord-tenant situation more even.

Clark has consistently said that if rent controls are introduced as a protection for tenants they are not effective because although they provide renters, they fail to give long-term benefits.

"If you look at controls as a measure to control inflation, I suppose they do seem to have a purpose," he said, "but in the long run they hurt renters."

On other changes in the act, Clark said that "they plug loopholes in the act abused by both landlords and tenants."

One thing the changes would do is "reduce the time frame for decisions in the sense that a tenant now can be 15 days late with the rent but we have cut that time in half," Clark said.

Other recommended changes include giving the rentalsman power of subpoena and the right to impose "more rapid and drastic remedies" in connection with "irresponsibility on the part of either landlords or tenants," Clark said.

He said the new act also will provide the rentalsman with powers to impose "onerous penalties" — without recourse to the courts — against anyone who acts fraudulently in connection with the rentalsman's office.

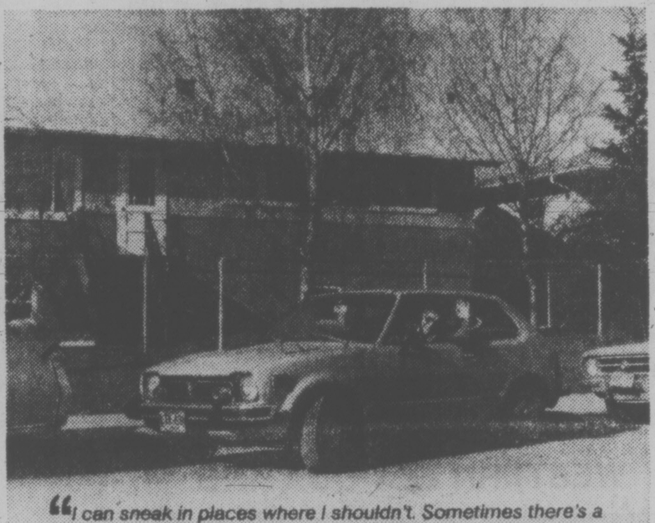
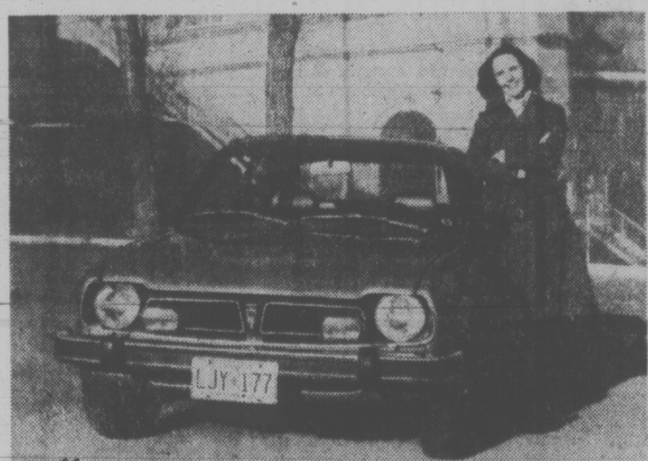
ASK THE WOMAN WHO OWNS ONE.

"For a single girl, or single guy, who wants good transportation, reliable transportation that's cheap, I would say get the Honda Civic. It's great!" Diane Murphy, Kitchener, Ontario.



"I can sneak in places where I shouldn't. Sometimes there's a truck or car waiting to get into a parking space where there's another car pulling out. And I'll sneak in there. You'll always find a place to park." Edna Tyess, Calgary, Alberta.



"They're a very easy car to park. And I found even when I go and do the grocery shopping, it's very easy just to throw the groceries in the back part of the car. You can lay down the back seat and carry a lot of things around in it. I think women find it much easier to handle and it's not scary for them to drive." Donna LaBranche, Peterborough, Ontario.

"I'm sure the salesmen down there don't have too much of a hard time selling a car. The Honda car sells itself. You don't even have to wonder about it. Just go out on the highway and every second car is a Honda. We have our little signals, too. We honk when we meet." Lillian Hazel, Dartmouth, Nova Scotia.

An unusually high percentage of Honda registrations are made out to women's names. There must be practical reasons why Honda is so popular.

There are. The ease of parking. The low purchase price and maintenance costs. The spacious interior for children or parcels or both. But women also want emotional involvement.

Honda offers that, too. Women like the lines of the car. They like how it steers, how it corners, how much fun it is to wheel around in.

Stop the next female Honda driver you see getting out of her Honda and ask how she likes it. Better yet, test drive a Honda. And see how you like it. HONDA

JAVELIN PROBE SET BY OTTAWA

OTTAWA (CP) — A top federal civil servant has been appointed to investigate allegations of fraud in the operations of Canadian Javelin Ltd., a Montreal-based mining company.

The restrictive trade practices commission, at the request of Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Tony Abbott, issued an order May 17 setting up the inquiry and naming Frederick Sparling, director of the department's corporations branch, as the inspector.

Javelin, involved in iron ore mining in Newfoundland, is controlled by John Doyle of Panama, a fugitive from justice in both Canada and the United States.

"It has come to my attention that serious allegations of fraud, misfeasance and other misconduct have been made in respect of carrying on of the business of Canadian Javelin Ltd. . . ." Abbott said in his application to the commission to set up the inquiry.

The commission granted the request for an inquiry without notifying Javelin after government lawyers said such notice might prejudice the chance of getting company documents.

Now, Choice in Canada Savings Bonds

OTTAWA (CP) — The finance department announced Thursday that two new types of Canada Savings Bonds will be issued this fall, replacing the coupon and fully-registered bonds previously offered.

Investors will have a choice of either receiving bond interest each year or of permitting interest to be reinvested and compounded automatically.

If a bondholder wants regular annual interest income, replacing the coupon bond will end the need to clip and cash annual coupons. Interest will be paid automatically by cheque or deposited directly to the purchaser's bank account.

For those who choose to reinvest the interest, the accrued interest will be compounded automatically after the first year, at the average annual yield to maturity.

Purchasers who want annual interest can still buy Canada Savings Bonds for cash in fully-registered form, which means they are registered in the buyer's name and fully guaranteed for principal and interest.

They will be sold in denominations of $300, $500, $1,000 and $5,000. They also can be redeemed and exchanged for an equivalent amount of compound interest bonds at any time between the date of purchase and the following Sept. 1.

The bonds offering compound interest will be sold for cash, or through payroll deductions. They will be sold in $100, $300, $500, $1,000 and $5,000 denominations.

If these bonds are cashed before maturity, investors will get the full face value of the bonds plus accrued interest and any compound interest earned up the month in which they are cashed.

There also will be some changes when applying for the new bonds. Buyers will be asked to give their social insurance number, which will be used in a new computerized registration and retrieval system.

The computerized system means that for investors who hold bonds of several issues and take the annual interest, payment will be made in a single cheque, or deposited to the holder's account. Multiple cheques and coupon clipping will be eliminated.

The finance department said it was announcing the changes early so potential Canada Savings Bond buyers can study the changes and decide which type of bond they prefer before sales start in September.

Wide-Ranging Bias Ban Given MPs' Approval

By ALEX BINKLEY

OTTAWA (CP) — A wide-ranging ban on discrimination was given final approval in the Commons on Thursday, the fourth bill passed by MPs this week as they began to pave the way for adjournment at the end of June.

The MPs, who began working an extra 7½ hours a week Tuesday, also pushed several other bills toward the end of Commons deliberation and promised to dispatch a series of minor ones in the next few days.

The human rights legislation now needs Senate approval and royal assent to become law.

The MPs let the bill pass after the government, with NDP support, torpedoed by a count of 107 to 56 a Progressive Conservative attempt to broaden its appeal provisions.

In the last two weeks, the Commons has approved a variety of bills after months of low productivity since the session started in October.

The MPs passed bills to limit urban growth around airports, to require federal approval for provincial takeover of airlines, to set up Air Canada as a separate corporation and eliminate its $1-billion debt, to increase the number and salaries of federally-appointed judges and to approve a series of measures from the March 31 budget.

The human rights bill establishes a federal code barring discriminatory practices on the basis of race, national or ethnic origin, color, religion, age, sex, martial status or physical handicap.

It also allows citizens to examine some government files on themselves and sets up a human rights commission to investigate charges of discrimination.

Government backbencher Simma Holt (Vancouver-Kingsway) said the bill "codifies the government's abhorance of any form of discrimination."

But Leonard Jones, the independent MP for Moncton, said it won't stop "subtle discrimination" on the basis of language within the federal government.

MPs also concluded debate on a bill ratifying agreements between Canada and West Germany, Morocco, Pakistan, Singapore, the Philippines, the Dominican Republic and Switzerland to avoid double taxation of income earned by Canadians in those countries.

They agreed to a proposal by Finance Minister Donald Macdonald to delete Germany from the list because of changes in German tax law since the agreement was negotiated. Macdonald said he hoped the agreement could be revised.

MAIL TALKS SNAGGED

OTTAWA (CP) — The post office and the Canadian Union of Postal Workers exchanged accusations Thursday as the Public Service Staff Relations Board opened a hearing to determine its own literature to members on post office property.

At the outset of the hearing, which opened Thursday, government lawyer Walter Nisbit countered a union attack by accusing the CUPW leaders of bargaining in bad faith.

Nisbit, assistant director of legal services for the treasury board, asked for a ruling that would order a resumption of contract talks.

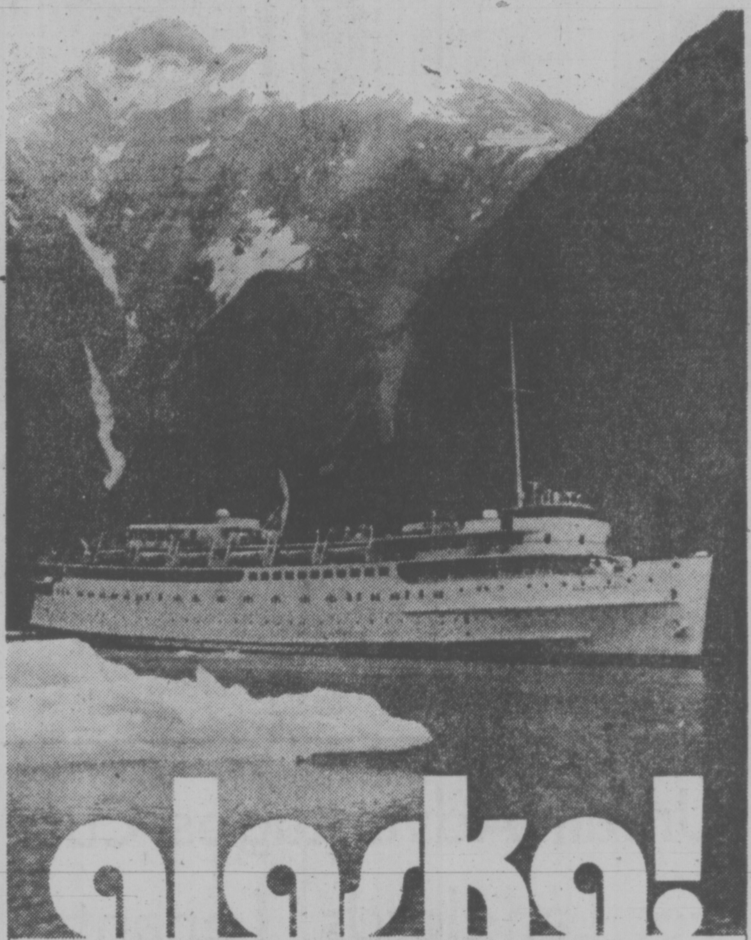
CUPW, representing 23,000 mail sorters and postal clerks, says it will not return to the bargaining table until the board rules on its right to distribute literature to the members during their work breaks.

Grain Hazard Report Out

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal labor department should take the initiative in researching the effects of smoking and exposure to grain dust says the final report of the Finn Commission on health and safety in grain elevators.

The report was tabled Thursday in the Commons by Labor Minister John Munro, nearly seven months after its completion,. The delay was due to translating it into French.

However, most of the report's finding already had been released to interested parties in the West by Munro.



And June is the ideal time to see it.

On June 8th, 16th and 24th, we sail north from Vancouver, up the Inside Passage and into the unparalleled beauty of Alaska.

And you'll experience it along with world famous Canadian Pacific service: superb dining, a comfortable outside cabin and friendly attention.

The ship is the Princess Patricia, perfect for Alaska cruising. Big enough to be comfortable, small enough to get in close to the scenery and into such places as Tracy Arm.

You'll also visit fascinating ports of call like Ketchikan, Wrangell, Glacier Bay, Skagway, Juneau, Prince Rupert and Alert Bay.

Before The Judge

A man who told Judge Blake Allan he was paranoic about entering the back of police vans was acquitted Thursday in provincial court on two counts of assaulting a peace officer but was found guilty of obstructing a peace officer and impaired driving.

Donald James Ryan, 29, of 886 Swan, was fined $400 on the impaired driving charge and another $100 on the obstruction charge.

Under questioning by defence lawyer Douglas Christie, Ryan said he was paranoic about going into police vans because "I got punched out in one when Iwas 19."

Referring to a Feb. 27 incident in Saanich which led to the four charges, Ryan said he told Constables John Rowan and Michael Copp he would go with them in a police car, but not the van.

Under cross-examination by Crown counsel Armand Petronio, Ryan said he would even have walked the one-block distance to the Saanich police building on Vernon Avenue.

Earlier, Rowan testified that he was kicked twice in the head by Ryan and Copp was kicked in the left shoulder while trying to subdue Ryan, who told the court he weighed 155 pounds and was five feet inches tall.

Rowan said the police were making an arrest for impaired driving and were trying to transport Ryan back to the station for a breath test when a scuffle began at the rear of the police van.

Rowan also told Allan that Ryan threatened the officers that if he ever got free, he would "wipe us both out."

The officer said to took five Saanich police officers to finally subdue and handcuff Ryan.

Ryan also told the court the officers were both kneeling on him and one (Copp) had his hands on his arms and neck area.

"Are you saying you were assaulted by a police officer at the police station without provocation?" asked Allan.

"I probably mouthed off," Ryan replied.

In making his ruling, Allan said Ryan's refusal to enter the police van was wilful and intentional and found him guilty of obstruction.

But Allan said he accepted Ryan's testimony of fear or paranoia of entering police vans and ruled that Ryan didn't intentionally kick the officers.

Sharon Margeret Lawson, of 1336 Beach Drive, was found guilty on the heroin charge by Judge Willian Ostler, who ordered a presentence report for June 20.

Court was told members of the Joint Forces Operation drug squad made a raid Dec. 29 at an apartment at 2622 Prior Street and had to make a forced entry at the front door and bathroom.

Lawson was found in the bathroom flushing the toilet and scraping heroin off an album cover into the toilet. An officer also recovered a condom containing heroin from the toilet, court was informed.

Boat Tour Company Nudged

Harbour Boat Rentals, a firm which has offered tourists its waterborne tours from the same pitch on the Causeway for 23 years, may be banished to the lower Causeway despite its warnings that relocation will kill the business.

The recommendation for the move came from the city's commercial and industrial development committee Thursday, after aldermen turned down alternative proposals to leave the firms where it is or offer it a new site for its sales booth at the corner of Government and Belleville.

Relocation to the lower promenade had been requested by the mayor and several aldermen, for esthetic reasons and to free the upper Causeway of clutter in the general area of the Captain Cook statue.

But when the matter came up for discussion Thursday, committee chairman Ald. Frank Carson said he had studied the scene closely and could not see how the firm is causing any problem.

"I believe in Jimmy Carter's philosophy," he said. "If it runs, don't fix it."

But only Ald. Ron McKenzie supported him in that belief, and the other proposal for relocating the firm at the Government-Belleville corner was also rejected.

In a letter to council, the firm had recalled its brief banishment to the lower Causeway in 1974. In about one week there, sales dropped by 70 per cent.

It said similar treatment now, leaving its sightseeing bus and Tally-Ho competitors reigning on the upper level, "would cause us to cease operation."

B.C. Hydro Must Talk Pensions

B.C. Hydro and Power Authority must bargain with three unions on pensions, the B.C. Court of Appeal has ruled.

In a unanimous decision, a panel of three justices — J. D. Taggart, P. D. Seaton and A. B. B. Carrothers — granted the appeal by the unions from an earlier court decision which had set aside part of a Labor Relations Board decision.

The three unions are Office and Technical Employees' Union, Local 378; Amalgamated Transit Union, divisions 101-134 and 109; and International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, Locals 213 and 258.

They appealed an earlier court ruling which quashed part of a Labor Relations Board decision which said B.C. Hydro had a duty to bargain collectively on pensions with the unions.

Mr. Justice Seaton, writing the unanimous decision, said the B.C. Hydro and Power Authority Act placed Hydro beyond the reach of most regulatory bodies.

"Indeed, it was not to be bound by most of the laws of the province. But the zeal of the draftsman to give the authority immunity has been equalled by the zeal of the draftsman to give the Labor Relations Board jurisdiction," he said.

Hydro argued that it had no obligation to bargain with the unions on pensions because, without the approval of the cabinet, it cannot conclude a contract relating to pensions.

But Seaton noted that the Hydro Act specifically made the Labor Code applicable to the public utility.

"That provision is not restricted to cases in which the code can be applied with inconvenience or difficulty," he said.

Seaton said he did not think that "complete freedom of action" by an employer was a prerequisite to bargaining.

"Agreements between an employer and a union will often be subject to others having authority to enforce rules concerning inflation, discrimination, health hazards, hours of work and so forth."

Teleglobe Technicians Walk Out

VANCOUVER (CP) — Forty-eight Teleglobe Canada technicians were on strike Thursday at the Vancouver office.

They were among 340 across Canada on strike against the federal Crown corporation.

Syd Hinds, western area representative of the Canadian Overseas Telecommunications Union, said the union launched a national strike Monday to back demands for a higher wage increase.

No immediate effect is expected on overseas calls but problems will arise whenever a serious breakdown occurs in the equipment, Hinds said.

The union signed a two-year contract last July, retroactive to Oct. 1, 1975,, after a four-day strike by technicians.

SOVIET EDITOR COOL TO TRADING ARTICLES

MOSCOW (AP) — The deputy editor of a Soviet newspaper says his publication probably will not accept the challenge of the Edmonton Journal to exchange uncensored articles.

On May 21, The Journal printed an editorial drawing attention to an article which had appeared in the publication Soviet Latvia which called Canada "a free society everywhere in chains."

In exchange The Journal offered to publish an uncensored article about Canada written by the Soviet press.

Reached by telephone from Moscow, Viktor Chukhkantsev, deputy editor of Soviet Latvia, said: "In principle, I do not think we would accept their challenge."

"First, we'd have to look at their article," he said. "Then I would have to consult with my colleagues."

He said that although he does not expect a Journal article to be published, there would be little reaction in Latvia if it were. He said, however, he could understand The Journal's "sharp reaction" to Soviet Latvia's report on Canada. The Soviet Latvia report said there is "mounting" racism in Canada against Indians and Eskimos.

ACTOR STEPHEN BOYD DIES AT 49

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Irish-born actor Stephen Boyd died of a heart attack while playing golf Thursday at age 49.

Boyd appeared in about 50 movies, often as a strong, ambitious man with few scruples, but was known for being able to play many different types of roles equally well.

He was proudest of his performance as Mesalla, the ruthless Roman tribune in the 1958 remake of Ben Hur which starred Charlton Heston.

Mesalla was Ben Hur's boyhood friend turned enemy who became his scythe-wheeled opponent in the chariot race scene that helped win Heston an Oscar.

It has since been added to the Motion Picture Academy archives as a classic action sequence.

"He was a fine gentleman and brilliant as Mesalla," Heston said when told of the death. "We in the profession will miss him."

Born William Miller in Belfast, Northern Ireland, Boyd became a radio actor at age 8, joined the Ulster Theatre company at 18 and was a doorman at a London movie theatre when his looks caught the eye of British actor Michael Redgrave, who helped him join the Windsor repertory company.

He had small parts in British television and movie productions until his starring role in The Man Who Never Was.

Companies Plan Garbage Swap

TORONTO (CP) — Industrial garbage from one industry is "as good as gold to another industry," says Dr. R. G. Laughlin of the Ontario Research Foundation.

Beginning in November, the federal government will finance a two-year program informing 42,000 Canadian firms about a garbage swap.

Laughlin told a industrial waste conference Wednesday that industries could retrieve valuable materials including acids, oils and solvent that now usually go to incinerators or landfill sites.

Six times a year the government will publish a list of what industrial waste is available and what discards are wanted.

Transporting the garbage will be up to the companies wanting it.

Big Roots Project Planned

WASHINGTON — Author Alex Haley says he wants to spend the profits from Roots on correcting the distorted images Africans and Americans have of each other, but first he wants to see how much the taxman leaves him. Many Africans' impression of American blacks come from old movies portraying them as "the grinning, shuffling oaf," while black and white Americans form their impressions of Africans "from Tarzan and Jane and Jungle Jim," he said.

NOTTINGHAM — A dog's visit to a lamp post led to an explosion Thursday and put a nine-year-old boy in hospital. The dog urinated on electrical wiring which had been exposed by vandals at the base of the post where seconds later, Michael Robbins leaned his bicycle. A metal part touched the wet wiring, causing a short-circuit and explosion. The boy was thrown off his bicycle and treated in hospital for burns, grazes and shock. The dog was not hurt.

GEORGETOWN, Colo. — Sheriff Gene Keifer draws the line at making moonshine in the Clear Creek County Jail. Five prisoners recently plugged up a jail-cell sink, the sheriff said, and using apples and oranges they got for desert, bread crust for yeast and sugar given them for coffee, they started brewing a half-gallon batch. They also added a few squirts of toothpaste. A towel was draped over the sink, but the fermenting brew was found during a routine check of the cell. Keifer charged all five prisoners with introducing contraband into the jail. Beyond that, he said, there will be no more apples or oranges for dessert. "Let them eat prunes," he said.

ROME — Italian film director Roberto Rossellini, a founder of the neorealistic film movement after the Second World War, died today at his home, apparently of a heart attack. He was 71.

QUITO — In the first hostile demonstration of Rosalynn Carter's Latin American tour, about 150 students a block away nearly drowned out President Carter's wife as she conferred with Ecuadorean officials. "I heard some noise, but I don't know anything about it," Mrs. Carter said Thursday afternoon as she left the Legislative Palace after a discussion of the military junta's plans to return the Ecuadorean government to civilian control next year. She said she thought it was "a local problem."

WASHINGTON — Former U.S. secretary of state Henry Kissinger has accepted a one-year appointment as a professor in Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service, reliable sources said Thursday.

SIRHAN
. . . questions

SOLEDAD, Calif. (AP) — Sirhan Sirhan says a return visit to the kitchen of the Ambassador Hotel might help him remember the assassination of Senator Robert Kennedy.

"He keeps trying to visualize it, and he can't," said Sirhan's lawyer, Godfrey Isaac. "He wants to know himself, did he, or did he not kill Senator Kennedy?"

Kenneth Hahn and Baxter Ward travelled to Soledad prison in central California on Thursday at Sirhan's invitation. They were the first officials to question him since he was convicted of the Kennedy killing in 1969.

Sirhan, gun in hand, was grabbed as Kennedy fell in the Ambassador kitchen on June 5, 1968.

Sirhan has insisted ever since that he remembers nothing between the time he entered the hotel to the time he was pinned to a steam table by his captors.

The county board of supervisors has been investigating the Sirhan case for some time, trying to determine whether anyone else might have motivated or helped the Palestinian refugee.

"There is a blank in Sirhan's mind," Hahn said. "If we could uncover that, we might have the clue to many of these mysteries."

Shots Fired At Vesco

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — A former presidential candidate, wrapped in a red-white-and-blue Costa Rican flag and yelling "I want to die for Costa Rica," fired more than 20 shots Thursday at the home of fugitive American financier Robert Vesco.

Some parked cars were damaged by gunfire but the house was not hit and no one was injured.

Police said Gerardo Wenceslao Villalobos stood behind trees and fired at the millionaire's walled compound with a .38-calibre pistol. Villalobos was booked on charges of attempted homicide and jailed pending arraignment today.

"You do not pay taxes, you are corrupting my country," the 34-year-old Villalobos shouted in full view of television cameras and reporters. "I am alone without bodyguards."

Vesco has been living in Costa Rica about five years as a fugitive from authorities in the U.S., where he is accused of illegally donating about $2 million to former president Richard Nixon's reelection campaign and of embezzling $224 million from the Swiss-based Overseas Investors Fund, an international trust fund.

Ex-Beatle Paul and Linda McCartney are expecting another baby in September, they told reporters at Heathrow Airport on Thursday. "We're expecting another girl," Paul said. "We're used to girls." They have three daughters.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Today's deal, which was played in the 1977 National Mens Team-of-Four Championship, illustrates the highly competitive bidding that is typical of top-level tournament play. The deal also serves as an example of the imaginative and sometimes daring defense that is required for one to emerge as a winner.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♣	1 ◊	1 ♡	2 ◊
3 ♣	3 ♠	4 ♠	Dble.
5 ♣	Pass	Pass	5 ◊
Pass	Pass	6 ♣	Dble.
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Two of ◊

North thought long and hard about bidding six clubs after South's vigorous bidding in clubs. He finally decided to pass. But when East then bid five diamonds, North concluded (incorrectly, as it turned out) that South possessed only one diamond. So North bid the slam in clubs.

West, on lead, also indulged in some wishful thinking: that East, for his raises in diamonds, had the diamond king. So, at trick one, he led the deuce of diamonds, underleading his ace! When east won this lead with the queen, he had no doubt as to why west had made his unorthodox lead — especially since he could see ten hearts between dummy and himself. West had to be void of hearts.

At trick two East returned a low heart, West ruffing the trick. Since East had won trick one with the queen, East was now known to possess the diamond king. So West again underled his diamond ace, East's king taking the trick. Another heart lead was then ruffed by West. Thus South was set three tricks, doubled and vulnerable, for a loss of 800 points.

Had West been permitted to play the hand at five diamonds, doubled, South would have had the opportunity of becoming a hero. Assuming that North elected to open the spade ace, and then followed up by leading a second spade, South would ruff. He could then underlead his A-K of clubs, enabling North to win the trick. Another spade lead would next be ruffed by South, inflicting a 500-point set on East-West.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Saturday, June 4

By SYDNEY Omarr

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You get chance to prove a major contention. Standing in community is enhanced. You are given added authority. Opportunity for advancement is accented. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure in important ways. The number "8" plays significant role. Accept challenge.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Good lunar aspect coincides now with journey, closing communication, generation gap, gaining grip on personal philosophy and faith. Aries is in picture and so is Libra. You finish assignment; you're ready to step forward, into a promising future!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You get to heart of matters. You learn where you stand in a "special" relationship. Money and emotions are involved. Stand tall for independence, self-esteem. Love is very much in picture. You have right to look forward to new start, to be appreciated. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Teach, learn, observe, collect data — and give full play to intuitive intellect. You will rise above minor, family conflict. Accent is on co-operation, joint effort, partnership marriage. Cancer, Aquarius persons are part of scenario.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Light touch is best — don't force issues. Avoid direct confrontations. Emphasis is on moderation, employment, nutrition, health resolutions. Accept invitation to social affair. Broaden horizons through meetings, exposure to compelling concepts. Yes, Gemini is involved!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You're capable now of cutting through red tape, breaking away from restrictions. Scorpio figures prominently. What you do, you do with passion. Others sense renewed dedication. Path to progress will be cleared.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Be practical, analytical, piece together missing links. You can come up with complete story — and that would be to your definite advantage. Be ready for changes, news regarding future investment, assignment. Gemini, Virgo, Sagittarius could be in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Home, family, close neighbors all become part of scenario. You are vital, your ways are "winning," you receive compliments and large portions of affection. Taurus, Libra figure prominently and so does the number "6." Yes, the open. Emotional debris will message, call or letter will arrive — in the affirmative!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Accent on organization, discarding nonessentials, being realistic concerning potential. Streamline procedures — check valuables. Protect your own interests. Pisces, Virgo figure in picture. Steer clear of self-deception.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Lunar cycle is such that you need not take back seat in any situation. Timing, judgment are on target. Be direct, independent, confident. Deal with Leo. Insist on getting to heart of matters. Wear bright colors. Make new acquaintances — welcome challenge. Love is very much in scenario.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You get some information, feedback which is encouraging. You now learn that what you have to offer is more valuable than originally anticipated. Bargaining position is strong. Know it and stand tall!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Pleasure principle is accented. You're happier, more creative; you win friends and influence people. You get chance to rectify past errors, to start anew. Vitality returns — desires are fulfilled. Yes, you get what you need and you make significant gains.

IF JUNE 4th IS YOUR BIRTHDAY, you are dynamic, creative, rebellious; you make mistakes and this is okay with you. You would rather make an effort and fail, rather than make no effort at all. You blueprinted your own destiny at an early age — you may have been in trouble but you were not a deliberate troublemaker. Aquarius, Scorpio, Leo persons play important roles in your life. In October, you realize that wounds are healed, that you can — and will — make a magnificent comeback.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. HUNTER

"A thousand bucks for one cow!" Sam exclaimed. "I stocked my complete farm for less than that. Hogs, sheep, and calves, 108 in all."

"And not always for the better," the old man replied. "A sheep cost me $3 more than a hog, and a calf $4 more than a sheep. I remember I bought as many more sheep than calves as the number of hogs I'd have got for $36. It was the same amount for each sort of beast, but I forget the totals."

How much did he pay?

(Answer Monday)

Yesterday's answer: PRETTY was 743551.

Impact Office Opens

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government has opened an environment office here to examine controversial federal government projects in British Columbia.

John Herity, head of the Pacific Environmental Assessment Panel, said Thursday his office is the first regional branch of the National Environmental Assessment Panel.

Herity said his office's first concerns will be a proposed third runway for the Vancouver International Airport, improvements to Fraser River shipping channels and expansion of the Roberts Bank superport.

SFU TALKS BREAK OFF

BURNAEY (CP) — Contract talks between Simon Fraser University and the Association of University and College Employees broke off Wednesday, sending union negotiators to seek a directive from the membership to go to mediation.

Pat Georgeson, president of the 500-member SFU local of the union, said talks stalled when the university refused to give employees any wage increases.

She said the university considers the employees to be overpaid compared with other workers in the public sector.

The university has offered a bonus of $250 an employee covering a 16-month priod.

The union's demand for a nine-per-cent wage increase across the board, along with larger raises for some groups in the bargaining unit, is above anti-inflation board guidelines.

Youth Program Overflows

The provincial government's Youth Employment Program has received requests for $6.4 million more than it has to distribute.

Vern Burkhardt, director of the program, said in an interview that the program has received applications totalling $22.7 million, but has only $16.3 million to give out.

Burkhardt said the program has a total budget of $22.5 million, but $6.2 million of this is going to other government ministries for student summer jobs and is not affected by the applications.

He said the funds the ministries are receiving are in addition to the $10 million they already have budgeted for summer jobs for students.

Burkhardt explained that the $6.2 million will go towards new jobs, while the $10 million will be spent on summer replacement programs and the beefing up of already existing work projects.

Under the program, different sectors of the public and municipal organizations can apply to the provincial government for up to 50 per cent of salaries for newly-created jobs for young persons.

The value of applications received in the various categories and the amount available to that particular sector are as follows:

Non-profit organizations, $5.9 million requested, $2.2 million available; independent businesses, $5.7 million, $3.7 million; farms, $2.6 million, $2.6 million; municipalities, $2.5 million, $2.4 million; universities, $2.5 million, $2.3 million; community colleges, $1.2 million, $1 million; school boards, $733,000, $698,000; regional districts, $732,000, $707,00; hospital boards $610,000, $610,000; local improvement districts, $165,000, $165,000.

LeBlanc Shuns Prairie Fishing

WINNIPEG (CP) — Fisheries Minister Romeo LeBlanc said Thursday commercial fishermen in the West are directing their complaints at the wrong person.

LeBlanc told a news conference the federal government will not usurp provincial responsibilities for fishing in the prairie provinces but would act on recommendations made by them.

He said at a news conference that he told Renewable Resources Minister Harvey Bostrom and his counterpart in Saskatchewan during recent meetings, that the federal government will not stand in the way of any changes they request in the operation of the Freshwater Fish Marketing Corporation.

But LeBlanc said there is one request made by the fishermen that he would not grant — the firing of the corporation's chairman, Peter Moss.

"I reject that request," he said. "I have complete confidence in Mr. Moss. If he was not so important in his role there I would have him involved in the management of all the fisheries in Canada."

Commercial fishermen, particularly in the North, have for some time cirticized the fish marketing corporation which markets their fish.

Inventive Hiker Hitches via CB

OTTAWA (CP) — Citizens Band radio has become a unique tool in the hands of hitch-hiker Murray Don Hyslop, 18, of Seattle, Wash.

It replaces the thumb, you might say.

Hyslop has been on the road for a year and finds the CB useful for obtaining rides from truckers, most of whom are equipped with CB units.

Using a hand-held transceiver he has travelled around the continent with Jim Frankinson, 20, an Alaskan Inuit from Point Barrow he met in Chicago last February.

Frankinson had been heading back to Alaska after a trip to Florida but decided to team up with Hyslop for a journey to Montreal.

They bought the hand-held transceivers at a Chicago pawnshop after working a couple of days unloading noodles and water chestnuts in the Chinatown section of that city.

They say the CBs are useful for obtaining rides, and talking to each other on the road and locating each other when in a new city.

Because many drivers won't pick up a pair of hitchers, they often "thumb" their rides alone and meet later.

"We would plan to meet at a certain time in whatever city we were headed to," Hyslop said. "Sometimes we got rides together."

He said he decided to travel after graduating from high school.

Although there are a lot of stories about hitchers having bad experiences on the road, Hyslop says he's been lucky. He's only had a few rough times—none of them serious.

Soon after that, he said he was approached by another broke traveller who wanted him as an accomplice for a bank robbery. He declined.

Instead he earned $200 and went south.

In Guatemala he was deported for sitting on the grass in a park and was flown to a Mexico City immigration prison.

"It wasn't bad,'" he said. "The only thing was that you had to buy your own food and it was expensive."

Then with only $4 in his pocket, he was sent to the border town of Nuevo Laredo across the border from Laredo, Tex. From there he rode the rails—illegally hitching rides on freight trains—from one place to another.

A LITTLE BACKGROUND ABOUT THE BUILDING AND COMPANY

The exact date that our building was built has not been discovered. However, it is known that the firm of "Dickson, Campbell & Co.", who were London and San Francisco based commission merchants (i.e. importers) moved to this site in late 1863. Photographs dated December 1866 show the building from a viewpoint across the harbour. On May 20, 1867 Dickson, Campbell & Co. advertised that they had bonded their "stone warehouse." Rates for bonded storage were "3 bits per ton per month."

The wooden upper walls (second and third storey) were added in two stages, the water end first and the street end later. One of these additions was done in 1885 when the building was taken over by the Mount Royal Milling Company of Montreal. Both sections were in place by 1891 by which time the building had acquired its "gingerbread" or decoration. In 1885 Mount Royal Milling also built a large brick boiler house behind the stone building but this has long since disappeared. The rice and flour mill was operated under the name of Victoria Roller Flour and Rice Mills until about 1907. Over the next two decades the building often stood vacant for years at a time.

Mock Terrorists Breach Security

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (UPI) — A reporter and a photographer for a weekly Alaskan newspaper report they recently made a mock terrorist attack on the Alaska pipeline security system and nobody stopped them.

Reporter Robert Painter said in a story published Wednesday in the Alaska Advocate that he and photographer Ken Roberts set off a red smoke flare May 29 under the pipeline near Sourdough, about 220 miles from here.

Painter said no one stopped them when they drove up to the Alyeska Pipeline Service Co. camp near Sourdough, although there were guards sitting by the entrance.

"Even after the red cloud was released there was no indication anyone noticed the dense red smoke as we walked back to our car, not from the vehicles that passed us or from the airplane overhead," Painter wrote.

Alyeska officials deplored the front-page story. A company statement said, "Alyeska intends to be completely prepared to protect the pipeline the day oil comes through that line." Spokesman Lou Cancelmi said the story might "encourage some loony-tune out there to take an action that may be disastrous."

Security along the 800-mile pipeline has been a matter of concern in recent congressional hearings, and Advocate editor Howard Weaver noted that the "attack" took place while a group of congressmen was touring the pipeline to check on security.

In 1934 Morris L. Greene founded Capital Iron £ Metals Ltd. and leased the building to operate a scrap business. Over the years salvage operations led the company into sale of reusables, surplus, then hardware and finally the wide range of goods carried today. In 1972 the firm left the scrap business to concentrate upon its retail operation. While in the scrap business the company had dismantled nearly 100 ships, a number of mines and industrial plants such as the Goldstream and Brentwood Generating Stations. The photographs through the building are of vessels and townsites dismantled.
And now, in 1977 we have integrated additional space in a manner — we believe — to complement the design and workmanship of the original builders. While in the store please take the time to notice the great stone walls, placed stone by stone with whatever material was available, the iron shutters, the turned wooden posts, the cast iron columns and the main timber beams which are 80' long in places.

Kremlin Denies Visa to Lawyer

WASHINGTON (WP) — Washington attorney Edward Williams has been denied a visa to visit the Soviet Union where he hoped to help defend an imprisoned Soviet dissident.

Alexander Solzhenitsyn, the Soviet author and Nobel Prize winner now living in Vermont, retained Williams to defend Alexander Ginzburg, a close friend of Solzhenitsyn and his wife, who was arrested in February near his home outside Moscow.

In an interview, Williams said the Soviet embassy here rejected his application for a visa and told him it would never be granted. Ambassador Anatoliy Dobrynin told Williams by telephone that his request for a visa was "unprecedented, presumptuous and arrogant," the lawyer said.

In an effort to help his client, Williams said, he will now take Ginzburg's case "to the court of public opinion." Publicity "is our last weaponry," Williams said.

The lawyer was to testify today before the so-called Helsinki commission, an intergovernmental body created by Congress to monitor compliance with the European Security agreements signed in Helsinki.

He is also planning to solicit signatures of "leading Americans" on a letter to the heads of government of the states that signed the Helsinki accords to "point out the failure of the Soviet Union" to comply with their human rights provisions.

Williams said he would lobby with the U.S. government to "Insist that the cases of the political dissidents (in the Soviet Union) be placed on the agenda" at the upcoming Belgrade conference of the Helsinki signatories. This conference is being held to assess the implementation of the Helsinki accords. It is scheduled to begin in June, though substantative discussions will not start until the fall. Williams said he has had one telephone conversation with Ginzburg's wife in the Soviet Union, but that it was "jammed" after just two minutes of talk.

Through other channels, the lawyer said, he has learned that Ginzburg has been held incommunicado since his arrest.

He has not been charged with a crime nor allowed to see a lawyer, Williams said.

Ginzburg, 40, was arrested on Feb. 4, shortly after he announced publicly that he had given away more than $360,000 provided by Solzhenitsyn to help the families of political prisoners in the Soviet Union.

Ginzburg, a historian and a famous figure among the tiny band of dissidents in Moscow, served a previous prison sentence for making and distributing a transcript of the trial of two dissident writers in the mid-1960s.

Williams this week released an open letter demanding Ginzburg's freedom signed by 326 Soviet citizens — an unusually large number of signatures.

U.S. Firm's Study Ads Misleading?

WASHINGTON (UPI) Claims of potential job oportunities and earnings made to promote Bell and Howell Co's home study courses are false and misleading, the U.S. Federal Trade Commission has charged in a formal complaint.

The company sold home study courses in TV repair electronics and accounting up until January of last year, the FTC said.

In making the charges against Bell and Howell, the FTC also said it may seek full or partial refunds for tuition of those victimized by the practices.

Anti-Communist Editor Shot

MILAN (AP) — Left-wing extremists Thursday shot and wounded Indro Montanelli, 68, anti-Communist editor of a conservative newspaper in the second such attack on a journalist in two days, police said. In Florence, two reporters' cars were set afire and an extremist group claimed responsibility. Officials said the attacks apparently signalled an extremist campaign to intimidate the press.

Lawyer Guilty of Murder

VANCOUVER (CP)—A Victoria lawyer was found guilty Thursday of second-degree murder in the strangulation death of her elderly cousin.

A B.C. Supreme Court jury returned the verdict against Eloise Roads Wilson after three hours of deliberation. Mr. Justice F. Craig Munro ruled she must serve 10 years of her life sentence before being eligible for parole.

Mrs. Wilson was charged with murder after Marion Hamilton, 69, who was under her care, was found strangled in her Vancouver home Dec. 2, 1975.

Crown evidence was that Mrs. Wilson was the sole beneficiary of the $175,000 Hamilton will and had given up her law practice to look after the occasionally-senile woman full time. Testimony indicated the accused had resisted suggestions by Mrs. Olga Young, a co-guardian of Mrs. Hamilton, that the ailing Mrs. Hamilton be placed in a nursing home.

The accused was quoted as saying the Hamilton estate was not to be depleted by the costs of private care.

Crown counsel John Hall said during the trial that Mrs. Wilson wanted to murder her cousin because of her "undue interest" in the $175,000.

Mrs. Wilson's lawyer James Sutherland said the woman could have been murdered during a burglary, and contended that the accused's husband had as great a motive to commit murder as his client.

It's a tight, tight squeeze for this naval reservist

THE PATRIOTS

Albert Head 'Ghost Town' Springs to Life

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

We drive up to the gate.

We look down the barrel of a rifle.

We stop.

The young woman behind the gun isn't fooling.

Until now the 500 acres at Albert Head, owned by the national defence department, has been a "ghost town" says Patriot's commanding officer, Lieut. Don Arnaud.

Originally built as a coastal gun site at the beginning of the Second World War, the army has occasionally used it for field craft training and the navy, as a grenade range.

He said the reservists with rifles are being assessed for their ability to throw up roadblocks and patrol for enemy. It's all part of a program to teach military skills, leadership and discipline.

The day starts early — at 5:45 a.m. — running an obstacle course that's not for the timid.

"We're not just taking a bunch of citizens and making sailors out of them . . . playing a little game," said Arnaud.

He explains that part of the training is aimed at teaching the reservists to get along with other people.

Jealousy Caused Saanich Shooting

Jealousy was the motive for a Saanich shooting incident early Thursday that left one man dead and two others wounded, Saanich police Insp. Robin Stewart said today.

Stewart said Wayne Gundrum, 32, who died of a rifle wound to his head, was distraught over breaking up with Robin Lee Clarke and was jealous she was seeing his close friend and roommate Kenneth Paul Wilke.

Stewart said a police investigation has determined Gundrum went to Mrs. Clarke's house at 4031 Hollydene at about 5 a.m. attempted to murder her and Wilke, then took his own life.

One was found at his home at 1521 Cedar Glen, the other was in his pocket when police discovered his body in the bathroom of the Hollydene house.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre will conduct an inquiry into the death.

Wilke was shot in the arm and broke his ankle and cut tendons in his leg when he leapt through a bedroom window to get away from his assailant.

Mrs. Clarke was shot in the back of her shoulder while running down a hallway trying to flee the house.

Wilke staggered half a mile to get help while Mrs. Clarke made it to a car and drove herself to hospital.

Wilke and Gundrum were former rugby teammates. They played on first division University of Victoria and Castaways rugby teams.

Wilke is regarded as one of the top rugby players in Canada.

Ask The Times

Q. What years did some of the Eastern states in the U.S. celebrate Thanksgiving on a different date than the rest of the country? How many states were involved. — P.J.L.

A. The first holiday celebration was held by the Plymouth colony in December, 1621, and early American colonies held thanksgiving celebrations in recognition of any happy event such as good harvests and victories over the Indians. In 1789 President George Washington issued the first presidential thanksgiving proclamation in honor of the new constitution. During the 19th century, more and more states observed the day annually, each appointing its own date. President Abraham Lincoln on Oct. 3, 1863, proclaimed the last Thursday in November as Thanksgiving, and President Franklin D. Roosevelt made that day a national public holiday.

Workers Still Leave Despite Job Boost

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The number of jobs available in Victoria is growing but not enough to stem the outward flow of workers, Canada Manpower regional manager Stan Purdy said today.

"We will continue to lose more people than we gain for some time. These conditions will continue at least until the end of the year."

Purdy was commenting on a report by Victoria movers that 100 families move out for every 40 that move in.

"We have been warning people of this for months but it has been difficult to get people to listen," Purdy said.

"We have been saying that Victoria must make a concerted effort to attract new industries and to promote the tourist industry."

Purdy said the Victoria office of Canada Manpower has already spent 75 per cent of its budget in the mobility program after only two months.

"These funds will be all gone by mid-June," he said.

The money is used to assist families to move to areas where work is guaranteed. Many Victorians have been moving to Alberta.

Purdy said the workers being lost are all skilled. No unskilled workers are moved through the mobility program because there is no shortage of unskilled workers in other market areas.

The result, he said, is that Victoria is being left with a large pool of unskilled workers.

If the economy suddenly improves, he said, Victoria could find itself with a serious shortage of skilled workers for essential jobs.

The outlook is not entirely gloomy, however, he said.

For example, 1,370 jobs came into the Victoria office of Canada Manpower in May, up from 934 in April.

And on the first day of June there were 57 new jobs posted on the board, up from a normal daily average of about 20 to 24.

The jobs came from all types of economic sectors but mainly employers were looking for people in the hospitality industry. There was a slight increase in employment at the local shipyards as well, with 340 being on staff, up from 300 in April.

But employment continues to sag in the construction industry.

Latest figures for the Victoria area show there is a working age population of 174,000, consisting of all people 15 and over. Of this total, there are 102,000 in the work force with 92,000 of them being unemployed.

The unemployment rate continues to be around 10 per cent.

Purdy said while jobs continue to be fairly scarce in Victoria, some vacancies have been on the books for more than one month.

These are jobs that are highly skilled or unattractive to large numbers of people.

The unattractive jobs are mainly housekeepers and live-in domestics who may earn only $350 per month plus room and board.

There are about 30 unemployed hairdressers in Victoria but none are interested in hairdressing vacancies in Nanaimo, Purdy said.

Some don't want to leave Victoria while others say they would prefer a salaried position and not have to work on a straight commission.

A survey compiled by information director Dan Bowes showed nine million board feet of lumber, four thousand tons of pulp and 150 tons of fish were shipped from the port of Victoria during May.

The British Columbia Forest Products sawmill is operating at three full shifts and is using two full shifts and part of a third in the sawmill.

$10,000 In Loot Recovered

Two juvenile boys arrested early today in connection with six overnight break-ins in the city are suspected in as many as 60 other break-ins in Greater Victoria.

A Victoria police spokesman said officers have found more than $10,000 worth of stolen goods stashed in the boys' homes in Colwood and Victoria.

The goods include a number of calculators, radios and walkie-talkie sets.

The boys, aged 15 and 16, were picked up at 3:30 a.m. after officers spotted them acting suspiciously in the area of Blanshard and Broughton.

The pair tried to run off but were apprehended after a foot chase over several downtown blocks.

Ironically, police were in the area investigating another matter at the time.

Patrol Insp. Doug Grant said a building alarm drew a number of police units into the area.

Although the alarm was subsequently found to be false, officers decided to search the area and spotted the juveniles.

Grant said the overnight break-ins were at a restaurant on Blanshard and a group of lawyers' offices on Broughton.

TOWN TALK

Some people who went to see national Conservative leader Joe Clark at the Chamber of Commerce luncheon Thursday have yet to see him.

It was so crowded in the Old Forge, due to a record turnout, that it was difficult to see any of the head table party. Pillars blocked the view of some while other members of the audience were treated to a view of the rear side of three television cameramen.

One woman who stood up said she was trying to seek Clark's wife, Maureen McTeer.

She was told not to waste her energy because McTeer was not present. She was in Vancouver recovering from a mild attack of tonsilitis.

One man commented: "He sounds good. What does he look like?"

However, he was obviously buoyed by the large turnout and joked that many of them may have turned out to check on a report that he was dead, a report which is somewhat exaggerated, he said.

Yet more progress in this enlightened age of public drinking.

If Victoria city council accepts a committee recommendation, thirsty fans at soccer and baseball games in Royal Athletic Park will be able to lubricate their vocal chords with a quick drop of what they fancy — as long as it's beer or cider.

The drinks would be sold during the game, and for half an hour before and after. Presumably the after-game beverage would be for fans wishing to celebrate, or drown their sorrows.

The committee was assured this week by recreation manager Jack Morgan that he foresees no problems with spectators at soccer and baseball games.

Strange, though, nothing was said about extending the privilege to rugby games. Perhaps, in the colorful imagination of bureaucrats, the drinking reputation of rugger types conjures up fearful visions of bacchanalian orgies?

Thirty years ago, Princess Elizabeth was about to be married to young Prince Philip. Gifts were sent from all over the world, including Anacortes, Washington.

The Anacortes Chamber of Commerce was apologetic because the town couldn't afford to send gold or silver or precious stones, so it sent the pride of Puget Sound, a case of tinned sockeye salmon.

Liz wrote back a personal note thanking them for "so acceptable a present" and assuring the chamber the choice was one that gave her pleasure.

Now, in commemoration of Queen's silver jubilee, the Anacortes group sent another case of tinned sockeye, passing along congratulations to her and the "British Empire."

Chamber members say they aren't sure whether the Queen and other members of the Royal Family will taste the salmon, "but maybe the butlers and servants at Buckingham Palace will have a great feast."

The condition of the yew hedge bordering the Fairfield Road side of Ross Bay Cemetery has caught the eye of some passers-by, who are apparently wondering whether the hedge is dying.

But Al Smith, the city's acting parks administrator, assures Town Talk that's not the case.

Those who are familiar with such things know that yew's hue become brownish at certain times of the year, "adding to its beauty," he says.

As for those ragged patches and gaps in the foliage, Smith says they're the unfortunate result of at least three motor vehicle accidents in recent years, which have left the hedge looking "a little miserable."

One errant car alone took out some 50 to 60 feet of the hedge, and such damage takes a long time to repair.

★ ★ ★

Chief Superintendent Gordon Dalton had so much fun reading quotes from old accident reports to Broadcast News editors Thursday he could hardly get the words out.

He cited them in closing his remarks about some of the RCMP's in-house communication problems, like trying to make sense out of:

"The guy was all over the road. I had to swerve several times before hitting him."

And he broke up over: "An invisible car came out of nowhere, hit my car and vanished."

But the selections looked suspiciously like those collected and published a few years ago by ex-Saanich and Victoria policeman John Adams under the title, Tell it to The Judge.

The French government has granted University of Victoria faculty member Dr. Michael Ashwood-Smith the status of professor in French universities.

Ashwood-Smith, one of six foreigners selected, will be a year at the University of Dijon researching and lecturing.

Ashwood-Smith has been specializing in researching ways to freeze white blood cells, which would aid in the treatment of cancer.

He also recently received a federal grant for his research in marine microbiology.

'Still Trying' and Capable, Archer Coming Along Nicely

"I'm still trying," Archer said after a six-under-par 66 gave him a one-stroke lead Thursday after the first round of the $250,000 Kemper Open golf tournament. "It's coming along. It's getting better,"

"I'd decided not to play this year," Archer said. "I was just going home and work on my game, try to work myself back into condition. But then I won the Sahara in Las Vegas (last fall) and that gave me an exemption for this year. That's the only reason I'm out here now.

"That operation was a disaster. It took away my left side. My game, my putting, everything, just went."

But he hit well enough Thursday to leave three of the biggest hitters—Tom Weiskopf, Jim Dent and Barney Thompson—one stroke behind at 67.

Charles Coody, Chi Chi Rodriguez, Kermit Zarley and Don Iverson were grouped at 68 in exceptionally good scoring that was at least partially attributable to players being allowed to get their hands on the ball.

Most of the grass on the 7,160-yard Quail Hollow Country Club course was killed by a hard winter followed by a drought. Recent storms turned the fairways into muddy plains and tournament officials had to go to winter rules, allowing the players to lift, clean and place the ball in the fairway.

Lanny Wadkins, twice a runner-up this season and the leader through three rounds last week in Atlanta, headed a big group at 69. Defending champion Joe Inman, Lee Trevino and Hubert Green were at 70. Arnold Palmer once had it three under par for the day but finished with a 71.

Good Day for Hurlers On the Softball Fields

Softball was a pitcher's game Thursday.

Bob Harris and Bob Richdale looked after the shutout jobs in men's circles while Tess Patterson and Nancy Beale highlighted Senior Women's Softball League victories.

The veteran Harris, getting a big break in the first inning, left nothing to chance thereafter as he mowed down 19 of the final 20 batters he faced to spark Bob Caldwell's Colony Inn Royals to a 3-0 victory over Seabord Construction in Stuffy McGinnis Men's League action at Central Park.

Seaboard appeared to get off to a good start when Mike Taaffe tripled with Brian Grexton on first base, and only one out. Grexton, however, was ruled to have missed second base and the apparent run was nullified.

Richdale tossed a one-hitter as Remco Office Systems blanked Webb and Trace 4-0 in the Heywood Men's League. Richdale walked three, struck out seven while Darryl Ell, with a home run, Barry Robb and Dwayne Bertram, each with two hits, provided the power at the plate.

Beale and Patterson both fashioned four-hitters at Hyacinth Park. Beale also collected two hits as CJVI Vicettes defeated Ingraham Hotel 7-1. Patterson's performance enabled Victoria Athletics to defeat Colony Inn 3-1.

Vera Chiu also had two hits for Vicettes, including a two-run triple.

The hitters spelled the difference at Sanscha Park as Seaboard Properties edged Harvey's Sporting Goods 3-2 in Sidney Men's League play.

Don Frampton and Doug Boden unloaded back-to-back homers to provide Seaboard with its victory.

In the Macdonald Men's League, Ryan Talbot broke a 2-2 tie with a two-run homer in the seventh inning to give Athletics a 4-2 decision over winless Trafalgar Legion; homers by Dan Ireland and Jim MacKay powered Cliff MacKay Ltd. to a 13-2 victory over Strathcona Hotel, and Davidson Cement downed Mayfair Insurance 5-3.

LORENTZ GETS CONACHER AWARD

TORONTO (CP) — Centre Jim Lorentz of the National Hockey League's Buffalo Sabres was awarded the Charlie Conacher Trophy on Thursday night for his humanitarian and social-services contributions during the last year.

Lorentz was chosen for his work in muscular dystrophy programs in the United States.

The Conacher dinner, attended by 1,150 persons Thursday night, is held annually in memory of the NHL star who died of throat cancer in 1966.

Other nominees for the award were Reg Leach of Philadelphia Flyers, Keith Magnusson of Chicago Black Hawks, Lanny McDonald of Toronto Maple Leafs and Doug Jarvis of Montreal Canadiens.

Scouts to Stay

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jake Milford, new general manager of Vancouver Canucks, said Thursday he is keeping Larry Popein, director of player personnel, and the National Hockey League Club's three scouts.

Milford signed a two-year pact Tuesday as the club's new general manager, replacing Phil Maloney, who was fired the same day.

Scouts Jack MacDonald, George Wood and Gil Strumm will be kept on, he said.

Milford said he will meet today with Bob Pulford, his prime candidate for new coach.

"I spoke with Pulford this morning and he wants to talk with me," said Milford. The two worked as coach and general manager of Los Angeles Kings for four years until they both resigned last week.

Milford said Orland Kurtenback, former coach of the Canucks, also is being considered for the position.

Kurtenbach has not been offered a 1977-78 contract since the end of the season, during which he replaced Maloney on an interim basis in December.

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — Chako Higuchi, No. 1 player in Japan for the last eight years, scored three birdies enroute to a three-under-par 69 Thursday to take the first-round lead in the Ladies Professional Golf Association $100,000 tournament.

Higuchi, only one in the field of 104 to escape with out a bogey on the 6196-yard course at the Wyhagyl Country Club, holds a one-stroke lead over Sandra Palmer.

Fergy Out

PINEHURST, N.C. (AP) — Bob Panasiuk, Tim McCutcheon and Michel Boyer were the Canadians who survived the first cut after the third round Thursday at the Professional Golfers' Association tour qualifying school at Pinehurst Country Club.

A total of 138 golfers out of 414 made the cut-off score of 217, two over par on the three Pinehurst courses.

Panasiuk, of Windsor, shot a 70 Thursday for a three-round total of 214, one under par. He was tied with Tim McCutcheon of Kitchener, who shot a 69 Thursday.

Michel Boyer of Laval, Que., shot the low score Thursday among the seven Canadians attempting to qualify, a 67. He survived with a 215 total.

Hunters Close Gap

Saanich E. J. Hunter Construction moved to within one point of leading Victoria Strathcona Stingers by tripping Nanaimo Timbermen 13-8 in a Vancouver Island Junior "B" Lacrosse League game Thursday night at Pearkes Arena.

Stingers, however, have a game in hand.

Earl's No Pearl In Eyes of Twins

By The Associated Press

Baltimore Orioles have been playing nearly flawless baseball of late, but their manager has made two errors in the last two weeks.

Earl Weaver, who admitted he committed a tactical blunder that cost Baltimore a recent game against Minnesota Twins, made another strategic mistake Thursday night as the Orioles dropped a 7-4 American League baseball decision to Chicago White Sox.

"It was all my fault, it was all my mistake," said Weaver. "That's why I held a meeting and apologized to my players."

"For some ungodly reason," said Weaver, "I thought first base was open and I was going to have McGregor walk Essian intentionally to get to Ralph Garr. After I motioned for the pitching change, I realized my mistake."

Everyone else at Comiskey Park in Chicago realized Weaver's mistake when Essian hit a bases-clearing double, providing the White Sox with a 7-0 lead and their eventual winning runs.

In other American League games, New York Yankees whipped Minnesota Twins 10-3, Detroit Tigers defeated Cleveland Indians 4-2, Texas Rangers beat Boston Red Sox 3-1 and Oakland A's edged Seattle Mariners 1-0.

In the only two National League games, New York Mets downed Montreal Expos 7-4 and Houston Astros beat Cincinnati Reds 6-4.

Designated hitter Lou Piniella led a 14-hit Yankee attack by knocking in three runs with a two-run homer and a sacrifice fly, and right-hander Ed Figueroa posted his seventh victory of the season as New York beat Minnesota.

Willie Horton hit a pop fly down the left field line in the eighth that shortstop Rick Burleson muffed. On the next pitch, Horton hit a double, scoring two runs and lifting Texas over Boston.

Lee Mazzilli drove in three runs, two with his first home run of the season, helping the Mets over the Expos before 11,-090 at the Olympic Stadium.

Canadians Out in Amateur

GANTON, England (CP-AP) — Jim Nelford of Vancouver, the last Canadian survivor, was eliminated in the fifth round of the British amateur golf championship Thursday.

Nelford, winner of the Canadian amateur title the last two years and member of Canada's World Cup team, dropped a 3 and 2 decision to Sandy Lyle of Britain.

Nelford, 22, who plays out of Vancouver's Marine Drive Golf Club, was among the final 16 survivors Thursday morning when he beat David Atkinson of Britain, 2 and 1, in the fourth round.

Graham McIntyre of Halifax was ousted in the fourth round, losing 2 and 1 to Leslie Walker of Britain. Last year, McIntyre, 28, was eliminated by Dick Siderowf in the fourth round.

Siderowf, from Westport, Conn., went on to win the title in 1976 but he was eliminated in the first round this year.

The last three Americans were eliminated by Britons in fourth-round play.

Madden Hatcher III, the United States junior champion, was beaten 6 and 4 by John Glover; Bill Loeffler lost to Lyle 5 and 4; and Dick Runkle bowed 4 and 3 to Peter McEvoy.

It is the first time in about 10 years that there is no U.S. amateur in the last 16 of the 92-year-old tournament which had been won by Americans four times since 1971.

Hatcher, Loeffler and Runkle were the remnants of a 54-strong U.S. challenge which started Monday on Ganton's 6779-yard par 72 course.

Three U.S. seeds — Siderowf, current U.S. champion Bill Sander, and Fred Ridley, 1975 U.S. champion, all were knocked out in the first two rounds.

Four Englishmen, three Scotman and a golfer from Northern Ireland will compete this morning in the quarter-finals.

A Hot Time in Stands In French Open Tennis

PARIS (AP) — Raul Ramirez of Mexico and Guillermo Vilas of Argentina gained the semi-finals of the French Open tennis championships Thursday and ended the seven-year domination of the title by European players.

Vilas destroyed the last remaining European, Wojtek Fibak of Poland, 6-4, 6-0, 6-4.

In the semi-finals, Ramirez and Vilas will face each other, and Brian Gottfried of Fort Lauderdale, Fla., will play Phil Dent of Australia.

There was a dramatic interruption in the first set. After Ramirez had scored a lucky point off the wood of his racket, Panatta angrily kicked the ball into the crowd and was given a hostile reception by the volatile Parisian fans.

While that was going on, a girl spectator's clothes caught fire. Fans spilled on to the side of the court and ball-boys ran with bottles of water to put out the fire.

One title was decided. Pam Teegaurden of Los Angeles and Regina Marsikova of Czehoslovakia, partners for the first time, won the women's doubles by defeating Helen Gourlay of Australia and Rayni Fox of North Miami Beach, Fla., 5-7, 6-4, 6-2.

TWO MORE IN DAFFODIL CUP TEST

The Snevas Just Keep Coming Along

By JIM CRERAR
Times Staff

Tom and Jerry are more than a couple of cartoon characters to car racing fans.

The Snevas have emerged as one of the sport's better-known brother acts since last Sunday's running of the Indianapolis 500, where Tom finished second and younger brother Kerry was 10th, winning the rookie award.

That puts the Snevas, who hail from Spokane, right up there with Al and Bobby Unser and Donny and Bobby Allison.

Victoria racing fans are familiar with both Spokane drivers, who have driven at Western Speedway in open-wheeled competition on their way up the ladder.

But what they may not know is that Tom and Jerry aren't the only racing brother act in the Sneva family.

Welcome younger brothers Jan and Blaine, who have entered the 17th running of the Daffodil Cup for supermodified and sprint cars Saturday night at Western. It's the first open-wheel show of the season locally.

Jan, 25, and Blaine, 23, have been racing since they got their drivers' licences. Jan, in fact, finished second last weekend in the supermodified main event at Kamloops to Spokane's Les May, the current points leader in the Canadian-American Modified Racing Association series. May is also due to drive here Saturday.

Despite problems over tire regulations involving the Washington Racing Association, 19 cars have entered Saturday's 50-lap main event, enough to make up a solid competitive field. There will also be three heat races and a pair of trophy dashes.

The less costly tires are expected to make racing more competitive between the sprint cars and the supermodifieds.

Victoria's Roy Smith will aim the Daffodil Special at an unprecedented fifth straight Daffodil Cup triumph, his earlier victories coming in 1968, '71, '75 and '76. He's a solid favorite to make it three in a row after setting three track records in two main-event wins and a second-place finish earlier this season.

Sooke to Victoria Waters Best for Salmon Fishing

Waters between Sooke and Victoria must be rated as first class while deciding where to go salmon fishing this weekend.

Tom Smith, a retired policeman, landed the biggest chinook so far this year when he tied into a 51:04-pounder early Monday morning while trolling just off the tip of the Victoria breakwater. The lunker, which took only 20 minutes to land, was taken on an anchovy and red and silver Hot Spot flasher in 45 feet of water.

Fishermen working the Sooke area were topped Saturday by the first two salmon ever taken by Terry Strain of Merritt. Trolling with strip, Pal flasher, eight ounces of weight and 40 to 50 of line, he landed both fish — a 42 and a 24-pounder — within 10 minutes of each other off Otter Point.

Action has since declined at Sooke although a few nice catches continue to come in from the vicinity of Secretary Island.

Al Perry had the best of a good return between Aldridge Point and Beechey Head with a 42:05-pounder taken Tuesday on a minnow. Trollers have been using between 40 and 100 feet of line and from one to two pounds of lead. Strip has been the main producer and a few fish have also started to come in a Buzz-Bombs from the same area.

★ ★ ★

The stretch of water between Pedder Bay and Church Island has been yielding an excellent return. Randy Wright boated the largest, a 35-pounder, early Sunday morning while trolling an anchovy with a Roy Smith dodger off Church. Besides being the top fish of the week for the area, it won Wright top honors in the annual Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association derby.

A great amount of feed, consisting of six and seven-inch herring, has moved into the area and salmon have been taken at all depths.

Chinooks to 30 pounds form a good catch ff Trial Island and The Flats at Oak Bay with strip the best bet for bait when trolled between 40 and 60 feet in depth.

Sidney fishermen are experiencing best success between James Island and Sidney Spit. Elwood Thompson landed the largest, a 20:09-pounder, Saturday while trolling a green Squirt behind a Hot Spot flasher on a 36-inch leader in about 70 feet of water right near the Red Cam Bouy.

Lots of fish in the eight to 12-pound range have been taken. Most other catches have been made on hootchies and bait bunt a few spin-fishermen are beginning to connect with Stingsildas off the Powder Warf and Sidney Spit.

The evening bite has been tops off Deep Cove, where strip minnows and anchovies have pulled in chinooks to 16 pounds near Wain Rock and Coal Point. Best catches were made while trolling with a downrigger set at about 120 feet although a few nice fish were landed by casting Stingsildas near Wain.

★ ★ ★

Chinooks to eight pounds may be found in the middle part of Saanich Inlet off Coles and McKenzie bays as well as the Bamberton waterfront, and fishermen have been nailing good numbers of chinooks to five pounds just about everywhere in Finlayson Arm.

Trout anglers continue to experience good luck in a number of Vancouver Island lakes and streams but most of the action so far has been on bait.

Around the southern end of the Island, Elk, Durrance, Prospect, Cusheon, Shawnigan, Dougan's and Quamichan lakes have yielded good returns.

Some nice catches of rainbow trout are still coming in from the upper reaches of the Cowichan River.

Further north, Brannan, Westwool and First lakes are producing while Sproat and Nahmint lakes are yeilding some excellent catches of trout. Kjell Pederson of Port Alberni landed a 14:03 pound rainbow recently in Nahmint.

In the Campbell River area, all the small lakes and the lakes of the Campbell system itself are yielding good returns and some excellent catches of sea-run cutthroat trout have been reported at the mouth of the Campbell.

Kubiceks Boot The Game Away

Farmer Construction, aided by six opposition errors, upset Kubicek A's 8-6 in a nine-inning Victoria Senior Amateur Baseball League game Thursday night at Lambrick Park.

Three of those miscues were committed in the ninth frame, where Farmers outscored Kubiceks, 3-1.

Mike Baier started things off in the ninth with a single and was sacrificed to second by Bob Mabee. Baier then scored and Ron Holmes reached base on a two base throwing error. Holmes stole third and scored what proved to be the winning run on a wild throw. Dan Rogers scored the insurance tally with his first home run of the season.

Jeff Owens had a no-hitter going for Kubicek before yielding a single to Rogers in the sixth inning. He was replaced immediately and Farmers scored seven of their runs against relief pitchers.

Terry Painter, Wayne Krimmer 2-1 (4), Ron Holmes (9) and George Pakos; Jeff Owens, Dale Aune 1-2 (6), Darryl Kubicek (9) and Ross Barnett, Don Burrows (8). Home run: Farmers — Dan Rogers (1st).

Hawley to Ride Run Dusty Run

NEW YORK (AP) — Sandy Hawley was named Thursday to ride Run Dusty Run in the June 11 Belmont Stakes, third leg in the United States Triple Crown.

Run Dusty Run finished second to Seattle Slew in the Kentucky Derby and third to Seattle Slew in the Preakness. Trainer Smiley Adams criticized Darrel McHargue's erractic ride aboard Rusty Dusty Run in the Preakness.

Castaways Seek Title

Castaways of the Victoria and District Cricket Association are leaving tonight for Edmonton for the first step on the playoff trail leading to the John Ross Robertson Trophy, emblematic of Canadian club supremacy.

The winner of the Saturday match between Castaways and Sportsman's Club of Edmonton, the Alberta champion, will advance to the Western Canadian final against the winner of the Manitoba - Saskatchewan series at Winnipeg in July. The national final will be played in Toronto.

Castaways will also play an exhibition match against an Alberta Cricket Association President's XI Sunday before returning home.

BRENTWOOD HIGHLY RATED

Brentwood College of Mill Bay has sent a top-notch contingent of oarsmen to the Canadian Scholastic rowing championships Saturday and Sunday on the Henley course in St. Catharines, Ont.

Led by stroke and captain Marius Felix, a six-foot-eight 218-pound Victoria resident, the Brentwood heavyweight crew has dominated competition on the west coast this year and has set course records for 1,500 metres at Burnaby Lake (4:31) and Mill Bay (4:34).

Felix was one of the four members of the crew that rowed to a sixth-place finish in the world championships last year and is regarded as an excellent prospect for the 1980 Olympic Games.

The Brentwood lightweight eights also has an excellent chance of taking the national title.

Preparing All-Stars Not a Difficult Chore

TORONTO (CP) — It's supposed to be tough to bring a group of football players together for one week and turn them into a cohesive offensive unit in time for an all-star game.

But Ron Lancaster, the 38-year-old Saskatchewan Roughriders quarterback who owns just about every professional passing record, disagrees.

"I don't think it's as difficult as a lot of people think," Lancaster said as he prepared for Saturday's East-West Canadian Football League all-star game.

"You're dealing now with an all-star bunch. These are guys who have stood out at their particular position. And in football, all teams run the same plays.

"The only hard part is the terminology, making sure everybody understands what you're talking about. But these guys have played enough football and understand enough that they pick it up fast."

And with running backs such as British Columbia's Mike Strickland, Winnipeg's Jim Washington and Calgary's Rudy Linterman to carry the ball and Saskatchewan's Steve Mazurak, Edmonton's Stu Lang and Calgary's Tom Forzani as receivers, Lancaster figures he hasn't a thing to worry about.

The game, scheduled for 5 p.m. PDT with CTV televising it nationally, is the 11th all-star contest officially recognized by the CFL but only the sixth on an East-West basis.

The first four games were played from 1955 to 1958 with the West all-stars winning two games and the East one. The other was tied.

The format changed when the CFL Players' Association revived the game in 1970, pitting the Grey Cup champions against an all-star team from the rest of the league. The all-stars won three of the five games played in that series.

A woman skipper will be at the helm of one of the six boats taking part in the 1977 West Coast Race, due to start 10 a.m. ton Saturday in the Brotchie Ledge area.

She's Jan Barton of Portland. Her boat is Super Pickle. The only Vancouver Island entry in the race, which is 536 nautical miles up to Triangle Island and back, is R. J. Morrison's The Bebelle of the Maple Bay Yacht Club.

The other four boats in the race are Steve Clark's Sassy of Portland, Bill Gardner's Lucy Alice of Seattle and two entries from the British Squadron, Royal Naval Sailing Association in Vancouver (organizers of the race). They are Dan Hughes' Maranda and Harry Trueman's Aquarius Girl.

Four of the boats were in last weekend's Swiftsure and Juan de Fuca classics, all racing under the Pacific Handicap Racing Fleet rating.

Super Pickle, Sassy and The Bebelle were unable to finish the Swiftsure race. Lucy Alice, opting for the shorter Juan de Fuca, finished 85th overall. The RNSA boats didn't compete.

All boats must meet Pacific International Yachting Association safety standards, also used in Swiftsure, and here is one sailor who feels the rules should be more strict for at least one of the requirements . . . liferafts.

Chairman of the PIYA's inspection and technical committee, Rich Kania of Vancouver agrees.

The loophole lies in language, the rule simply stating that the liferafts must be self-inflatable and checked twice a year. Up until now it's been once a year.

The rule doesn't spell out that it should be done by an authorized agent. So some skippers have been saving money by meeting the letter of the law only and checking them themselves.

We have had our family boat's liferaft checked each year for the past 13 years. This year, for a small four-man liferaft, the cost went up to $103.50.

Rich reports he's been "in a hell of a squabble" with his own committee, yacht clubs and club members, in his effort to get better safety written into the rules.

One boat he examined in Swiftsure had an inflatable dinghy tossed in a bag on the floor of the cockpit. It was not self-inflatable. Indeed, Rich reports, several of the liferafts are not up to snuff.

As the co-owner of a boat, every time we take a crew out to race, I'm always conscious that we are responsible for them and for the utmost safety of the boat.

Chances are that liferaft will never be needed in an emergency but, if it is, it seems stupid to save a few bucks on something so vital yet spend thousands of dollars on sails and electronics.

As Rich says, "It's the skipper who is ultimately responsible."

The Victoria Cal 20 fleet will be competing in the national championships at the Royal Victoria Yacht Club this weekend. The first three Canadian crews will qualify to race in the Cal 20 Association championships, to be sailed at San Francisco in July.

The Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, has its long-distance Cole Cup Race for cruising class boats and Sailerettes on Sunday. Start time is 10 a.m.

The Turkey Head Sailing Association will have its annual long-distance race for the Ron Mack Trophy on Sunday. The start will be off Cattle Point, also at 10 a.m.

George Cesarec's Galeb was over-all winner of THSA's series race on Tuesday. After her came Ed Cushing's Alouette, Soren Ixbrand's Danish Pastry, Gary Cooney's Sunshine and George Parkes' Fairlight. There'll be racing again Tuesday at 6:30 p.m.

The RVY Cwill have series racing 6:30 p.m. on Wednesday. The top three Laser sailors this week were Dave Richardson, Dave Teece and Kim Helwig. In Cal 20s, it was George Lewis' Sea Fever, followed by Ed Life's Semiramis and Pat Biden's Pegasus. The Thunderbirds and PHRF boats were all disqualified for sailing the wrong course.

The Salt Spring Island Sailing Club had a good turnout at Ganges for its annual regatta on the weekend. Lawrie Neish of the host club won in X-class dinghies, edging Bob Dalgleish of RVYC and Mike Cannon of Salt Spring. Fourth was Roger Myerscough of the Saanich Peninsula Sailing Association. Alex Neish, Robbie Cannon and Aileen Neish, all of Salt Spring, cleaned up in Sabot competition.

The first three boats in PHRF competition were also from Salt Spring. They were Brian Johns' Tamateapokiwhenua, Doug Foertser's Drifty Two and Dick Moore's Anuanua.

The Victoria Canoe Club has chosen an appropriate spot for its 6 p.m. meeting on Tuesday. It's the little island in the first lake of Thetis Lake. Members are reminded to bring their supper with them.

UNDER-21 HOPEFULS IN FINAL TRIAL TEST

It's "final impression" time for British Columbia's best soccer players in the 21-and-under category.

The pick of the Vancouver Island League will face the mainland's best in a Saturday trial match that will help determine the make-up of the team scheduled to represent the province in the Canadian Summer Games in August.

The Vancouver and Victoria sides played to a 3-3 draw last weekend in Vancouver and this Saturday's match will give provincial coach Barrie Clark one last look at the team candidates.

Seventeen will be selected to the B.C. team.

Saturday's trial test, scheduled to start at 2:15 p.m., will be played at Lansdowne Junior High.

The Victoria under-21 side includes Gord Reading, Doug Wellburn, Ian Bridge and Brian Ayers, all of Gorge Molsons; Danny Hood and Charlie Fisher, both of Victoria Athletics; Les Malvon, Franco Zanatta and Pete Zachray, all of UVic Vikings; Powell River's Drew Ferguson; Mike Hardy and Eric Jones, both of Victoria West and Steve Farrell of Cosmo Royals.

Higgins Selected For Hoop Tryout

Craig Higgins, who captained Oak Bay Bays to the Provincial high school championship in March, has been picked to attend a tryout camp for the Canadian national junior basketball team next month in Ottawa.

Higgins was selected, along with J. C. Kootnekoff of Burnaby South, to attend the national camp after attending a camp held in Vancouver last week by Canadian coach Jack Kenyon.

Twenty players have been invited to the national trials, but only 12 will be picked for the team.

Scotland Trims Northern Ireland

GLASGOW, Scotland (Reuter) — Ken Dalglish scored two goals to lead Scotland to a 3 0 win over Northern Ireland in a British soccer championship game Wednesday.

The Scots, who now share first place with Wales, both with three points, led 1-0 at the half before 44,699 fans. England is third in the race with two points and Northern Ireland is winless.

Anson in Feature

Dutch Savage and John Anson will clash in the feature bout of a professional wrestling card Monday at Memorial Arena.

A six-man, tag-team bout and two midget battles highlight the remaining matches, which get underway at 8 p.m.

Salmonbellies Whip Timbermen

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Bob Tasker scored six goals as New Westminster Salmonbellies defeated Nanaimo Timbermen 25-13 in a Western Lacrosse Association game thursday before 416 fans.

New Westminster led 12-4 at the end of the first period and 22-8 after two periods before running into penalty difficulties in the final session.

Jack Fulton scored four goals for New Westminster while Dave Matheson and John Hannah added three goals each, Darryl McColl and Bill Mosdell scored two goals each while Mario Govorchin, Brian Tasker, Walt Weaver, Keith Scott and Dave Wilfong added singles.

Wayne Goss, in his first game of the season for New Westminster, picked up five asssists. He is the all-time active leading scorer in the WLA.

Brian Evans had three goals and six assists to pace Nanaimo while Rick Baker picked up four goals. Jim Lynch scored twice for Nanaimo, with singles going to Ken Alexander, Bob Cool, Dan Piotrowski and Jim Guerin. Cool, in his first game, had four assists.

Rangers Sign Swedish Goalie

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Rangers of the National Hockey League have signed Swedish goaltender Hardy Astrom to a multi-year contract, it was announced Tuesday.

The 26-year-old Astrom, a six-foot 170-pounder, started for the Swedish national team which won the silver medal at the recent world championship in Vienna. Astrom was a member of the Skelleftea AIK club teams in Sweden.

Ipswich Wins Tour Opener

TORONTO (CP) — Ipswich Town, which finished third in the English League First Division this year, defeated Toronto Metros-Croatia of the North American Soccer League 2-1 in an exhibition game Thursday night.

The game, played before a crowd of 3826, was Ipswich's first in its North American tour. The team will play the Whitecaps in Vancouver on June 17.

Hundreds of Cold, Black Rhodesians Flee Weekly to Safety in Botswana

By DAVID MARTIN

FRANCISTOWN, Botswana black Rhodesian refugees, without blankets to protect them from the near-freezing temperature, huddled around campf fires here last week, awaiting their turn in the air charter "freedom ferry" between Botswana and Cambia.

Botswana Government officials say that 12,000 have already been airlifted out this year. In the past fortnight, there have been two charter flights a day and every spare seat has also been taken on scheduled airlines.

Even so, the torrent of refugees pouring into Botswana to escape harassment by Rhodesian security forces is greater than the number who can be moved out.

In a normal week, Government officials say they can fly out about 600. But the refugee flood has grown to around 800 a week, and the indications are that the figure is increasing as they flee from the area where Rhodesia has mounted 'Operation Tangent.'

The camp in Francistown, completed in August 1975, was designed to hold only 250 refugees. It has no kitchens, food storage, administration or recreational facilities.

At the end of last week, the camp contained almost 2,000 refugees, but there were only 913 blankets. Eight hundred of the refugees were sleeping in the open between four overcrowded dormitory blocks, which acted as an ineffectual windbreak. Three hundred of them did not even have a piece of cardboard to cover themselves to keep out the biting cold.

For all the refugees there were only seven large cooking pots and 109 plates. The septic tanks were overflowing, and Francistown's one vacuum tanker is not enough to deal with the town's needs.

Fortunately, for the moment, the refugees' resistance is fairly high. But there is a real danger of epidemics in the overcrowded, unhygienic camp and of pneumonia, as the weather becomes colder.

The refugees continue to arrive despite these appalling conditions. Many come because they say they are being beaten and harassed by the Rhodesian security forces, others because they want to join the guerrilla ranks.

Almost all of them have abandoned all their possessions. Children arrive in pyjamas. They are told by Botswana officials that there are no education facilities for them and are asked if they want to go back. All, the officials say, reply 'No.'

About a third of the refugees are aged between 16 and 25. Out of 1,836 in the camp on Thursday, 1,378 had said, according to officials, that they were supporters of Mr. Joshua Nkomo's Zimbabwe African Peoples Union (ZAPU), and almost all had come from Matabeleland, just across the Botswana frontier, where Mr. Nkomo draws the bulk of his support.

Last week, the United Nations Security Council unanimously endorsed a report recommending a three-year $53,500,000 aid programme to help Botswana deal with trhe refugee influx, tighten its security against Rhodesian incursions.

Even more important for Botswana is the UN meeting scheduled for next Friday, when potential donors will indicate what contributions they are prepared to make to help the country through its present geographically imposed crisis.

In human terms, the most immediate need is to provide for the refugees. Apart from the Francistown camp, there are a further 1,000 Rhodesian refugees 125 miles south at Selebi-Pikwe being housed in the juvekole wing of a prison and a makeshift tented camp.

The United Nations High Commission for Refugees is buidling a new camp at Selebi-Pikwe to hold 1,000 people, and the Red Cross, World Food Programme and World Lutheran Federation are all giving emergency aid to supplement the large sum Botswana has already spent.

The number of refugees at Selebi-Pikwe has been halved from 1,800 in the last 10 days, but the charter flights are costing $75,000 a week.

The primary reason for moving the refugees as quickly as possible from Botswana to Zambia is security. Last year Rhodesian troops, according to United Nations officials, slaughtered over 800 unarmed men, women and children at Nyazonia refugee camp in Mozambique.

The Francistown camp is only 10 miles from the Rhodesian frontier, and an attack similar to the one on Nyazonia is regarded as a very real possibility.

Botswana has complained about more than 30 Rhodesian attacks in the past 18 months and as a result six weeks ago established an Army for the first time — the Botswana defence forces — converted from the former police mobile unit.

But the Army and police force together number fewer than 2,000 men, and they have a country of 225,000 square miles to maintain law and order in and a lengthy border with Rhodesia to patrol.

A fortnight ago (just after the arrest of the first of the detained Selous Scouts), the Rhodesians launched their most serious attack to date on an Army base camp a mile inside Botswana and 50 miles east of Francistown.

The battle lasted two hours, and the estimated 150 Rhodesian troops used three troop carriers, an armoured car and a helicopter.

People in Botswana seem mystified as to why the Rhodesian attacks are escalating. 'The Rhodesians know as well as we do that there are no freedom fighter bases in Botswana,' said the new Army commander, Major-General Mompati Merafhe.

But, he admitted, if there was a further serious escalation in the attacks, Botswana might have no alternative but to ask other African countries to send in troops to help protect its territorial integrity.

NAZI SNIFFS CYANIDE

CHICAGO (UPI) — A Nazi and Ku Klux Klan sympathizer who killed himself with cyanide after a bungled home invasion apparently had a "hit list" of Jews whom he intended to kill "with the help of God and A.H.," police said Thursday.

The man, Raymond Leo Schultz, 37, had a record of arrests which included episodes with the American Nazi party, authorities said, and the initials "A. H." may have stood for Adolf Hitler.

Schultz killed himself in a police car May 22 by sniffing cyanide as he was being taken into custody after the slaying of Sydney Cohen. Cohen at first was thought to have died of a heart attack while struggling with Schultz. Medical examiners later found, however, that he died of cyanide poisoning.

Police disclosed that when they searched Schultz' apartment they found what they described as a "hit list" of Jewish names, including Cohen's. Next to Cohen's name was the notation, "Get this guy first."

Arms Dump Burns

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — An ammunition dump on the occupied Golan Heights caught fire Tuesday and the explosions were heard as far as Acre on the Mediterranean coast 36 miles away. Military sources said there were no casualties and the fire was extinguished after about an hour.

Immigrant Clamp Urged

OTTAWA (CP) — The Chamber of Commerce said Thursday that the government should stop giving preference to letting in immigrants nominated by distant relatives in Canada because they are taking up room that could go to immigrants who will work.

Chamber spokesman John Whittaker, Toronto head of the business organization's employer-employee management committee, said in an interview that nominated immigrants "tend to have more difficulty obtaining employment."

In a brief to the Commons committee on labor, manpower and immigration, the Chamber said nominated immigrants, other than grandparents, should "be required to come forward as independent immigrants and meet the criteria designed to indicate the likelihood of successful establishment in Canada."

The Chamber brief addressed to the government's proposed immigration legislation which eliminates the nominated category of immigrants by name but still would provide preference to applicants with relatives outside their immediate family in Canada.

Given even greater preference are sponsored immigrants with immediate families in Canada. A third category, independent immigrants, are let in on the basis of a point system under which immigration officials judge their likelihood of getting a job here, among other things.

The chamber said it supports a continuing policy of family reunification for the sponsored category "with due safeguards to ensure that such family members are unlikely to become public charges or make undue demands on publicly-provided social security measures."

Bill Skoreyko (PC—Edmonton East) challenged the Chamber's argument, saying nominated immigrants are more willing than Canadians to fill certain jobs in remote areas and adding that they do contribute to the economy.

The Chamber, which represents about 650 boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce across the country, endorsed the government's proposal to direct immigrants, under threat of deportation, to communities designated as under-populated or needing workers.

But, it said it has "reservations as to the effectiveness of such requirements unless accompanied by close monitoring and strict enforcement."

Lung Cancer 'Epidemic' For Women

BOSTON (UPI) — Lung cancer among women in the United States has reached epidemic proportions, a Yale University specialist says.

"Lung cancer among women is in the epidemic phase," Dr. J. Wister Meigs told the American Cancer Society's national commission on smoking and public policy Thursday.

The commission held the day-long hearing to gather testimony on new approaches to what it calls a "major public problem" — the health hazards of cigarette smoking.

Massachussetts health commissioner Dr. Jonathan Fielding told the panel 9,000 persons would die in Massachusetts alone this year from lung and heart diseases, fires and accidents cause by cigarette smoking. He estimated the medical costs of smoking at $114 million.

Jail for Haldeman, Mitchell In Watergate's Closing Act

By GEORGE LARDNER
Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The last act of the Watergate scandal was set Thursday with a tart courtroom denunciation of former president Richard Nixoin and a promise of prison in 20 days for his once-closest advisers, H. R. Haldeman and John Mitchell.

U.S. district court judge John Sirica said he would give the two men until June 22 to surrender to federal authorities and start serving their 2½-to 8-year sentences for conspiracy to obstruct justice and related crimes in the cover-up of the 1972 burglary of Democratic national headquarters at the Watergate office building here.

Lawyers for Haldeman, former White House chief of staff, and for Mitchell, who served as attorney general, said their clients would undoubtedly prefer to report directly to the institutions rather than to surrender to U.S. marshals here.

Sirica said he would still expect them in his courtroom for a formal hearing before June 22 at which time he can take official action.

Thursday's session was a semi-formal conference that Haldeman's and Mitchell's lawyers had requested — without their clients present — in light of the Supreme Court's refusal May 23 to review their clients' convictions. The high court also upheld the conviction of former top White House aide John Ehrlichman, who has already started serving his sentence, but Sirica has yet to receive the official papers or "mandate" of the court.

"I really don't have any jurisdiction at this point," he reminded the defence attorneys at Thursday's brief meeting.

Haldeman's lawyer, John Wilson, said he wanted the conference anyway to plead for as much time as he could get for Haldeman to put his affairs in order.

"I know there will be critics who'll say he's had two years to do that," Wilson observed, "but a man always puts these things off in the hope that they won't occur."

Wilson began with caustic allusions to the leak of the Supreme Court's action four weeks before it was announced, and to the televised interviews Nixon recently granted to commentator David Frost for a fee of $600,000 plus a percentage of the profits.

"The (former) president of the United States, for 600,000 pieces of silver, accused our client on television of having committed crimes," Wilson protested. He said the Nixon-Frost interviews were seen by millions of people, perhaps even the Supreme Court justices, while the case was ostensibly "sub judice," awaiting their decision.

In the first of his televised interviews with Frost, which was aired on May 7, Nixon sought to justify his taped advice to Haldeman and Ehrlichman to tell investigators" 'Idon't remember — I can't recall," by saying he was simply acting as a defence attorney.

meet TED PECK and enter our contest

Here's your chance to meet and discuss fishing and hunting with one of Canada's best known sportsman and perhaps win one of our fishing prizes! In the month of June, Ted Peck will be making personal appearances in Woodward's Sporting Goods Departments and will be happy to answer any question you may have regarding equipment or the sport itself. Ted Peck will be in Victoria Sat., June 4th.
And when you visit our Sporting Goods department be sure to fill out an entry form for our contest. There will be three draws in each Woodward's store and you just may be the lucky one to win a trolling rod, spinning rod or mooching rod. Or the GRAND PRIZE of a trip for two with Ted Peck for one day's fishing (winner must supply their own transportation to Vancouver). draw will be held June 20, 1977.

Policeman's Widow to Get Funeral Aid

EDMONTON (CP) — Solicitor-General Roy Farran said today he would be extremely upset if the widow of a Calgary policeman shot while on duty in downtown Calgary last week had to pay the costs of her husband's funeral.

Farran said the matter is outside provincial jurisdiction "but I have confidence it will be sorted out."

Two other Calgary policemen, detective Boyd Davidson and staff-sergeant Keith Harrison, were murdered within the last 2½ years. Apart from Canada Pension and Workers' Compensation Plan, no benefits are provided the widows, who were forced to pay most of the funeral costs.

Police association president Frank McDonald said Harrison's widow paid about $2,100 and Davidson's wife about $1,400. Neither the city nor the police department contributed toward police expenses.

There are no provisions in the police department's contract with the city covering funeral expenses but the police association will pay the cost of using Jubilee Auditorium for Shelever's funeral last week, said McDonald.

Sawyer refused to commit the city to payment of funeral expenses but said he has been authorized by the police commission to decide on an "equitable split" with the family on expenses.

HOUSING RENOVATION

WINNIPEG (CP) — Approval in principle has been given by city council for the creation of a non-profit housing corporation to renovate old homes and rent or sell them to the public.

A city report indicated the new corporation might repair and rent about 155 houses in its first five years and could repair another 240 for resale.

Mail Bogged Down

MOOSE JAW (CP) — Postal service is somewhat erratic when it comes to mail outside city boundries, a survey by the local Chamber of Commerce has found.

For example, a letter mailed in Moose Jaw May 9 was received four days later in North Battleford. Similar letters sent by the chamber on the same date arrived at their destination a full day earlier in Montreal, Trois Rivieres, Moncton and Dartmouth.

Chamber secretary-manager Earl Brown, who released the survey results, said 100 Chambers of Commerce in towns and cities across Canada were asked to participate and 92 responded.

Manitoba Told To Repay Inco

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba government has been ordered to repay nearly $1.8 million in had collected in royalties and interest from Inco Ltd.'s Thompson mine.

Mr. Justice J. Nitikman issued a written decision this week from the Manitoba Court of Queen's Bench in favor of Inco and ordering the province to repay the money.

The money was paid in 1972 after a reassessment by the provincial finance department. Inco paid about $1 million royalties for the period 1965 to 1967 and about $766,000 interest from 1967 to 1972.

Arena Up to Jets

WINNIPEG (CP)—Winnipeg City Council has tabled a motion to build a new arena until it knows what league the Winnipeg Jets will be playing hockey in in the future.

Councillors agree to table the motion and leave Mayor Steve Juba with the decision or when the next meeting to discuss an arena will be held.

Juba said he will not call a meeting to settle the arena issue until after the National Hockey League has decided whether it will accept the Jets into its league.

Firefighting Help

SASKATOON (CP) — Provinces facing huge firefighting costs should use the natural disaster policy for federal assistance, Federal Environment Minister Romeo Leblanc said.

While there are no proposals to provide financial assistance now before the federal cabinet, Leblanc said he suggested at a meeting of the Canadian Council of Resource and Environment Ministers that affected provinces turn to the natural disaster policy.

Under the policy, the provincial government pays the first $1 per capita of the disaster costs — in Saskatchewan's case, about $925,000. Above that figure, the federal government shares the relief costs, increasing its share as the costs climb.

Migration Down

REGINA (CP) — About 100 fewer people have migrated to Saskatchewan during the first four months of this year, compared with the same period in 1976, statistics compiled by the provincial government show.

Finance Minister Walter Smishek said an immigration of unemployed people to Saskatchewan could have an impact on the unemployment level.

Pharmacare Bill

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba government's pharmacare program paid out $5.3 million in claims during 1976, about $1 million more than the previous year.

Rene Chartier, executive director of the program, said costs ran slightly over the $5 million budget allotment because of increases in dispensing fees and medication costs.

The program pays 80 per cent of the cost of eligible prescription drugs after the first $50 expenditure.

Licence Suspension

WINNIPEG (CP) — A law permitting police to suspend the licence of a drinking driver for 12 hours will come into effect this fall, Attorney-General Howard Pawley said.

The minister said before the move is made, an educational program will be undertaken explaining the relationship between drinking and driving.

Five Nations Featured In Folkfest on Sunday

Traditions, folklore and artifacts of five nations will be featured at a Sunday afternoon show sponsored by the Inter-Cultural Association of Greater Victoria to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the Japanese community in Victoria.

Folkfest Preview 77 starts at 2:30 in the Newcombe auditorium of the Provincial Museum. Co-ordinator is Junie Harris.

Feature attractions will include songs, dances, and flower arrangement demonstrations by members of the Japanese Cultural Association, songs by the choir of the Vancouver Island Netherlands Association, and dancing and music by the Veselka Ukrainian Canadian Association.

Discussions on the Basque and five other regions in Spain, plus a Spanish song, will be offered by the Victoria Spanish Dancers Association.

Each national group will have a narrator to explain the meanings of the traditions.

Other attractions in the lobby of the auditorium will be four show cases displaying handicrafts and artifacts of Japan, Ukraine, Netherlands and Spain.

Big Crowd, Ovation For Clark's Windup

National Conservative leader Joe Clark received a standing ovation from a record Victoria Chamber of Commerce crowd of 440 Thursday as his week-long provincial tour ended on a high note.

Clark did not say anything new during his half-hour speech but his call for restraint in federal government spending, a reduction in the national deficit and a program to keep young people from going directly from school to the welfare rolls hit a responsive chord.

He urged a return to the spirit of adventure and enterprise that Canadians had "20 or 30 years ago."

There was a brief moment in 1967 in connection with the centenary and Expo that this sense of adventure was recaptured, he said, but the flame has died again since Trudeau became prime minister.

All the Liberals have done, he said, is redistribute existing wealth without trying to generate additional prosperity with imaginative industrial programs.

His proposal to disband government agencies which no longer serve a useful purpose brought a sustained ovation.

Much of his speech was an elaboration on the party's stand that the civil service should be made more efficient. In the last 10 years, he said, the federal public service has grown from 240,000 to 340,000, an increase of 100,00 with no corresponding increase in efficiency.

In many respects, he said, there is reduced efficiency because of duplication of effort.

For example, there are more than 20 federal agencies involved in the supervision of British Columbia's forest industry.

"The result is that this industry, so vital to Canada's future and so important to the international trade, is without any sense of leadership or direction from Ottawa."

Many of these agencies could make a meaningful contributation to the industry if their efforts were co-ordinated.

His concluding plea for government restraint and for a recapturing of the Canadian sense of enterprise and adventure produced a standing ovation that lasted 21 seconds.

Chamber president Alan Emery said it was the largest turnout he could recall for any chamber speaker.

After the speech, Clark flew to Vancouver where he was reunited with his wife. They returned to Ottawa today.

Aldermen O.K. Drainage Plan

A major 15-year program to upgrade the city of Victoria's storm drainage system at an estimated cost in excess of $11.6 million was recommended Thursday by the public works committee.

If the proposal is accepted by city council next week, the cost — estimated only in 1977 dollars, with no allowance for inflation — will be met on a pay-as-you-go basis with hefty annual appropriations from the city's operating budget.

In 1978 and 1979, the amounts required will be $500,000 and $750,000, according to city manager Jim Bramley.

Bramley told the committee that financing the long-term project from current expenditures is preferable to borrowing, not only because of the saving on interest but because such an approach offers much more flexibility.

If, for example, the program is considered too costly at some future date, it can be postponed or modified, whereas debenture financing would see the city "saddled with debt servicing" over a long period.

The need for major improvements to the city's antiquated and often inefficient storm drainage system was underlined in a report prepared nearly two months ago by city engineer John Sansom, following an 18-month study.

Sansom told aldermen Thursday the network of storm drains simply cannot cope with the volume of water produced by an exceptionally severe storm, with the result that storm water overflows into the sanitary sewer system causing backed-up basements and similar problems.

The Victoria area has been "extremely lucky" in that it hasn't experienced a storm of such severity for about 10 years, but it's only a matter of time before that happens.

"It's a significant problem which sooner or later will have to be faced," Sansom warned.

The committee also endorsed another of the city engineer's recommendations, to eliminate the remaining outfalls which still discharge raw sewage into the Inner Harbor.

This program — estimated to cost less than $1 million — is recommended to be tackled over a three-year period with loan financing.

Pakistan Won't Get Aircraft

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States has decided not to allow a proposed $700 million sale of 110 A-7 fighter planes to Pakistan, On the basis of President Carter's new arms control policy, state department sources said Thursday. They said addition of the fighter to Pakistan's arsenal would upset the balance of power on the subcontinent.

Helicopter Crew Rewarded

Three crew members of a U.S. Coast Guard helicopter in Port Angeles received medals Thursday for helping to rescue 16 people from an Airwest Airlines Ltd. Twin Otter plane that sank Dec. 16 two miles south of Victoria.

The helicopter flipped over during the rescue, damaging the helicopter's rotor system. The crew stayed on, however, saving the 16 passengers, the plane's crew and a dog. Another dog swam away and was never found.

PO Hohn Cawley received the Coast Guard Medal, presented on behalf of President Carter. Cawley dived into the water during the incident to help Lieut. (J.G.) Pete Berger pull survivors aboard the helicopter while Capt. C. W. Swickley remained at the controls.

Tea Party Toasts U.S. Coast Guard

The U.S. Coast Guard will be presented with a scroll at the Oak Bay Tea Party Sunday afternoon thanking its members for air-sea rescues performed in local waters.

A Coast Guard turbo-helicopter will land at Willows Beach for the 1:20 p.m. ceremony and the scroll will be presented to the crew by Mayor Brian Smith.

The party, which attracted 30,000 last June, will open Saturday with a parade at 10 a.m. from Windsor Park and ending at Willows Park.

There will be 39 entries in the parade, party co-ordinator Fred Usher said Thursday.

Opening ceremonies at Willows Beach Park at 1 p.m. will include the raising of flags with the Oak Bay Scarlet Band playing "Rule Brittania, followed by a demonstration of martial arts, highland dancing, and a lady's nail-driving contest.

Other afternoon attractions will include a dog obedience show, a pizza-eating contest, Zingari puppets show and a performance by the Sea Scots Pipes and Drums group.

Children sports will be held between 4:15 and 5:30 p.m.

On Sunday the Oak Bay Power Squadron will have a sailpast at 1 p.m., followed by a flypast by the Victoria Flying Club.

Other events are bathtub races, sky diving, a parasail demonstration, a performance of by radio-controlled model aircrafts and a boat show at Oak Bay Marina.

A midway will operate at Willows Park on Saturday and Sunday.

dear abby

Wanted: Real Outdoorsy Woman

DEAR ABBY: I know you aren't running a "Lonely Hearts Club, but I've nothing to lose but a postage stamp, so here goes.

I'd like you to help me find a wife. I am 50 years old, I've never been married and I'm in excellent health. I'm a retired S-Sgt. (U.S. Navy), get a lifetime pension, have money in the bank and some income property. I own a nice little cabin on 12 acres, deep in the woods near a mountain stream. I love to hunt and fish.

My wife must be the outdoor type. If she's never skinned a rabbit or filleted a fish, she should be willing to learn.

Don't send me any widows with kids or women under 40. I'm too old to start raising a family, and I don't care to finish raising somebody else's. She doesn't have to look like Sophia Loren as long as she's strong and healthy.

Enclosed is my picture. (I look short because I'm standing next to a redwood tree, but I am actually 5 ft. 9 and weigh 170.) I'd appreciate any leads you can give me. By the way, you don't happen to be single, do you?

WILLING TO GAMBLE

DEAR WILLING: Don't gamble on strangers — the risk is greae enough when you marry someone you know.

No, I don't happen to be single, but I wouldn't qualify anyway because I've never skinned a rabbit, and I'm NOT willing to learn.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "HATES TV": You may hate TV, but here's what Lee Loevinger, a brilliant Washington, D.C. attorney, has to say about it: "Television is the literature of the illiterate, the culture of the lowborn, the wealth of the poor, the privilege of the underprivileged, the exclusive club of the excluded masses; television is the golden goose that lays scrambled eggs. And it is futile, probably fatal, to beat it for not laying caviar. Anyway, more people like scrambled eggs than caviar."

Pest Problems: Some Require Pro

By LYNNE GORDON

caveat emptor

Are you bugged by bugs? I don't mean the electronic ones, but the creepy crawly kind that come out at this time of year.

Before you take your walk through the yellow pages, there are a few things you should know about pest control — before you answer an ad, phone an exterminator in desperation, or allow a door-to-door de-bugger into your home.

Some pest problems can be handled by you — ants, wasps or silverfish can usually be controlled with proper spraying, baits or traps. But for termites or cockroaches a professional exterminator may be the answer to the anthropod problem.

The most important consideration is, of course, price — and there are wide discrepancies in fees in this field. There are two or three big exterminating firms in Canada, and they are usually on the expensive end of the scale. Part of the cost comes from their overhead.

The larger firms have more staff on hand, provide cars for their operators and even have computerized billing. Your next question may be: Why pay more for the same job, when my money is just going to pay their rent?

It's not all that simple. Because of their volume, larger exterminating firms can offer guarantees, warranties, and follow-up services that small firms simply cannot afford. If you're not happy with the work, most of the larger firms will send in a supervisor to do it again — at no charge to the customer.

A "one-man operation", or smaller firm, may charge less, but often will not respond if problems arise later.

When you're making your initial contact, you might get a "free estimate" over the phone, but it isn't binding, so don't put faith in anything less than a full inspection which should uncover the extent of the infestation. You may have to pay for this inspection — and you may not. Some firms will deduct the fee from the rest of the charges if you decide to use their services.

Ger a contract for any work done. It should cover the type of insect, where the problem is located, the length of service and price.

And check the warranty. What does it cover and for how long? Will there be follow-up inspections? Warranties vary greatly in the pest control field.

Most companies offer a wide range of services, from full fumigation to the more common bugs. Some companies even advertise "unmarked car", if you're feeling a bit self-conscious about the Jones' next door.

Remember, pesticides kill bugs — but pesticides can also kill people. When you're selecting an extermination company, check the price, what kind of follow-up work can be done, and the qualification of the operator. Your health and protection is all-important, and will depend on all these factors.

FRENCH BAN COFFEE ADS

PARIS (AP) — Coffee advertising will be banned from French television for three months starting Wednesday in an attempt to reduce consumption and ease the strain on the country's trade balance. Coffee prices in France have doubled, and in some cases tripled, in the last 12 months, with many brands now selling between $4 and $6 a pound.

Stress Test a Valuable Tool

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D. —

I've been told that there are special tests that can predict heart disease. Where are these tests given? What do they consist of? — Mr. S. T., Okla.

DEAR MR. T.: In recent years, remarkably sophisticated tests have been devised in an effort to uncover early heart trouble.

One of these, the "exercise stress test," has been of particular importance in learning what the heart's energy reserve is. During exercise, the heart is monitored with special electronic devices and sensitive electrocardiographs.

Changes in EKG during exercise give the doctor important information, both for the diagnosis and the subsequent treatment of heart conditions.

The greatest contribution of the stress testing is in the early recognition of potential coronary artery heart disease in people who seem to be perfectly normal and without symptoms.

Stress testing is also of importance in designing an exercise program that will be beneficial and not taxing.

People who have recovered from heart attacks and from some forms of heart surgery are stress-tested in order to learn their capacity for exercise and work.

Specialists in cardiology believe that exercise testing should be a part of every complete physical examination in every person past the age of 35

The test can be done in the doctor's office, or in the hospital. It is uncomplicated, and can offer vital information about the state of the heart.

A friend of mine always forgets her own lipstick. She borrows mine and then I worry about the possibility of getting some infection. Please don't use my initials or my state. Then I can show her your answer. — Miss X

DEAR MISS X.: You are right in believing that it is unwise to trade cosmetics. In one study, it was shown that powder puffs that were traded between friends were contaminated with staphylococcous germs.

People develop an immunity, to the germs in their own mouths and on their own skin. Although they are safe from infections, these same germs may cause infections in others.

Several cases of severe eye infections were recently traced to an infected mascara brush that had been passed around at school.

I'm certain that lipstick can carry bacteria and viruses from one person to another. Show this to your friend.

OFF THE WALL

Louise DeGrave

Probably the most important quality you need to have as a prospective adoptive parent is a tolerance for long-term vagueness.

I don't have it.

For example, every time I call our adoption worker for a progress report, we have the same conversation:

Louise: (friendly and casual) "How are we doing on the list?"

Worker: (also friendly and casual) "OK."

Louise: "I know it's difficult to pinpoint exactly when we'll get our baby . . ." (Maybe we haven't got one because you don't like us?)

Worker: "I'm sorry, we really can't predict."

Louise: "Oh, I know, but is it at all possible it could be, say, within the next six months?" (Maybe you're mad because I work?)

Worker: "It's really hard to tell."

Louise: "Well, um, do you think it's likely to be say, within a year?" (Maybe you're secretly opposed to inter-religious marriages?)

Worker: "We just can't say."

Louise: "Within two years? We should have a baby within two years, right?" (Maybe you just can't find a match for us?)

Worker: "We just can't make promises."

I've noticed that this difficulty in tolerating vagueness sometimes causes me to operate on a different level.

"Hey," said Ralph the other day, "did you call the adoption people today? It's been six months since we talked to them, so they must have something more definite to say."

"As a matter of fact," I said happily, "I called, and it looks like we might get a baby soon."

"You're kidding!" said a jubilant Ralph, picking me up and whirling me around. "They said that?"

"Oh, no," I said. "They were their usual vague selves."

Ralph dropped me on the floor. "Then why do you think it might be soon?"

"Well," I said, "there was a new quality to their vagueness. More optimistic. Like the hospital had the week before they hired me." Ralph was looking at me like I needed to get out more. "It's hard to explain," I said.

"Try," said Ralph.

I thought for a moment. "Well, for one, she didn't sigh," I said. "Now that's new. Oh. And she returned the call after only one message."

"What's that got to do with it?" said Ralph.

"Think about it," I said. "Nobody wants to call back when all they're going to have for you in the foreseeable future is bad news. But if they know they're going to have good news fairly soon . . ."

"That's possible," conceded Ralph. "But is that all?"

"Well," I said, "I think there may have been a tiny twinkle in her voice . . ."

"Tiny TWINKLE?" said Ralph.

(Sigh). I think I'm going to let Ralph call the next time.

BRYANT'S ORDEAL

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Garnet Bryant won't work for his female foreman. He says the Bible forbids him.

"I'm not trying to be a hot-shot or anything like that," Bryant said. "It's just my firm belief. When Jezabel was running the show. Things got kind of topsy-turvy."

His opposition to Joyce Woosley, a foreman on the Ford Motor Co.'s assembly line here, has been a lonely ordeal. He's failed in attempts to transfer to another Ford installation and his union and the Kentucky congressional delegation won't help.

Bryant bases his opposition on I Timothy 2:12, with Genesis 3:16 and I Corinthians 11:3 and 14:34 thrown in for good measure.

In Timothy, the Apostle Paul writes:

"But I suffer not a woman to teach, nor to usurp over the man, but to be in silence."

WOMEN WELCOMED

OTTAWA (CP) — Fire Chief Roy Duncan says women are welcome to apply as city firefighters as long as they are willing to be assessed on the same basis as male applicants.

Commenting on an equal opportunities report advocating greater equality, he added that he had never received an application for a firefighter job from a woman.

indoor gardens

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

Are you pestered with pests? Now that warm weather is upon us, we can expect insects, pests, mites and bugs, and other critters that attack our houseplants. They multiply rapidly, so dealing with this plus providing maximum comfort for our plants become an important duty.

There is no one sure way to deal with infestations of critters. There are many pesticides on the market, many of them poisonous not only to the bugs but to all living things. What kinds of pesticides are there? There are contact poisons that kill soon after they are applied to an infested plant. There are stomach poisons, which are applied to foliage. When the pest eats the foliage it dies.

There are systemics, which are applied to an infested plant's soil. The poison is drawn up into the plant through the roots and distributed through all its parts. The entire plant becomes poisonous, and whenever a pest takes a bite from any portion of the plant, it is swallowing poison. Systemics remain in the plant for several weeks, giving it additional protection. Drenches are preparations applied to the soil. Most drenches are contact poisons, although some kill as their vapors are diffused through the foliage.

Malathion is the brand name of a contact pesticide. It can be sprayed on most plants (except ferns) or applied as a drench to the soil. It is effective against the attacks of most common pests and it is relatively nontoxic to you, your children and pets.

Fungicides are intended for use against plant disease organisms, such as mildew. Miticides are intended for use only against spider mites and must not be applied to edible plants. Nicotine sulfate can be used as a drench or a spray against foliage insects. (Do not inhale this powder while mixing, as it can be quite toxic.)

Synthetics are available as liquid concentrates or powders. We recommend their use ONLY in the most extreme cases when all natural methods are of no avail. The plant can be restored to health with the bugs gone, but the plant is highly toxic, if a child or pet decides to munch on a leaf, as the poison permeates every part of the plant.

Use common sense when dealing with pesticides. Use only one. Follow the instructions to the letter. Do not add more, thinking it will become more effective. That's a sure way to do in your plants. Use chemicals only as a last resort.

Prevention is well worth the time and involvement. Bugs and diseases attack the weaker plants, as with humans. Stay strong. Your plants need you!

MOSQUITO REPELLANT

By NORMAN H. STARK

Mosquitos are an enemy of man, and a deadly one at that. Diseases such as yellow fever, malaria, dengue and even the deadly elephantiasis of the tropics, can be attributed to them.

I believe it was Kipling who said, "the female is deadlier than the male." And perhaps he was right, at least in the case of the mosquito. The female attacks humans and animals, while the male is content to subsist on the juices of plants.

The best way to kill mosquitos is to destroy their breeding areas. When you think about their reproductive capacity — a single female may produce up to 500 eggs — the productive capacity is enormous. But when you're in your yard on a hot summer night, perhaps enjoying a cook-out, and these pests bother you, here's a tried and proved formula that will help.

The Formula

The ingredients you will need are two tablespoons eucalyptus oil, four tablespoons talc, and one and three-fourths cups cornstarch. Mix the talc and cornstarch together and then add the eucalyptus oil (from a drug store) until it is thoroughly absorbed. Store in glass, metal or plastic container. To use: Dust on clothes and skin to act as a repellent.

RECIPE: TAKE ONE CAR . . .

OTTAWA (CP) — Marilyn Adams was stumped when she came upon a recipe that called for veal which was pounded flat. But not for long.

Not having a mallet, she wrapped the veal in plastic, got out the family car and drove back and forth over the meat until it had the desired thinness.

Better Potatoes

To improve the flavor of old potatoes, add a little sugar to the water in which they were boiled.

Postmaster Aided Thieves

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (UPI) — The Atlantic City postmaster has been charged with providing the master key and layout plan to four others in a $1 million robbery of post office vaults.

The postmaster, Gordon F. Lawson, 37, of Ocean City and Wyndmoor, Pa., was arrested Tuesday at his office after a federal grand jury in Camden returned a sealed indictment, it was disclosed Wednesday.

Also charged in the scheme were Owen L. Gallagher, 39, of Wrightstown, N.J.; James H. Parsells, Somers Point, N.J.; Kenneth J. Perry, 36, Essington, Pa.; and David A. Egan, 42, Secane, Pa.

The grand jury charged that Lawson provided the other defendants with information concerning the physical layout, alarm systems, security provisions, contents of the vaults and work schedules at the building.

In addition, Lawson allegedly gave the building's master key to Egan who made two duplicates and returned one copy to Lawson to test the duplicate.

The other defendants are charged with breaking into the building in the early morning hours of Feb. 27, handcuffing security guard Charles Goddard to a railpipe in the basement and drilling into three walk in vaults.

The robbery netted $1,052,956.81 in cash, American Express travelers cheques, money orders, stamps and jewelry, according to federal authorities.

The defendants were charged with possession of stolen government property, conspiracy, aiding, abetting and interstate transportation of stolen property.

All five have been arraigned in U.S. District Court in Camden and are being held in lieu of $100,000 bail each.

Chinese Finally Talking About July 'Killer Quake'

TOKYO — In an unusual display of official candor, Chinese authorities have described last summer's giant Tangshan earthquake as the most deadly in China in more than four centuries.

The officials said that in Tangshan City, the July 28 earthquakes, which until now had been shrouded in strict secrecy, threw some residents six feet into the air and carved a swath of total devastation four miles wide and five miles long through the heart of that metropolis, a major Chinese industrial and coal area.

These and other new details have emerged for the first time now after briefings given by the Chinese to Cinna and Larissa Lomnitz, a husband-wife research team from the National University of Mexico in Mexico City. They were interviewed here after their departure from China where they had gone with their daughter Tania on what they all thought would be a routine two-week sesmological research trip.

But soon after their arrival on May 16, it became obvious that China had selected them as the bearers to the world of the first official description, albeit a partial one, of the Tangshan natural disaster. "Naturallyy, we got very excited," said the 52-year-old Lomnitz.

The trip was proposed last year by Limnitz as an official mission of the Mexican Research Council under a three-year-old program of scientific and cultural exchange between Mexico and China. Lomnitz, a seismologist, wanted to study China's earthquake prediction research; Mrs. Lomnitz, an anthropologist, was to study Chinese social organization. Their original August, 1976, visit date was postponed by the earthquake.

"Of course," said Lomnitz "I knew a number of seismologists had gone to China since then, but whenever they'd bring up Tangshan, they'd get only silence. The disaster was an unmentionable. I figured it would be the same for us."

But the couple's schedule, as detailed by Kou Wen Chue, director of the Seismological Division of the Seismological Bureau in Paking, began with several days of briefings about the Tangshan earthquake, including series of meetings with seismological experts from Tangshan's Hopei Province, who experienced the tremor and did rescue work. The Mexican couple was told they were being given previously secret information as a courtesy to fellow members of the undeveloped "third world."

The Lomnitzes were not permitted to visit Tangshan, formerly a city of about 1 million inhabitants about 100 miles south-east of Peking, nor were they given panoramic pictures of casualty figures, which are regarded in China as matters of national security.

But scores of disaster descriptions, parts of photos, the data presented and repeated references to the tremors massive devastation prompted Lomnitz to suggest that the Tangshan quake must have produced more casualties than any other shock since 830,000 people died in China's Hussien County earthquake in 1556, which is the most deadly earthquake in recorded history.

Yes, you are correct, the Mexican was told in China's direct acknowledgment of a massive death toll. It makes the Tangshan shock, which registered between 7.8 and 8.2 on the Richter Scale, officially far worse than the 1923 Tokyo earthquake in which 140,000 perished and the 1920 tremor in China that saw 200,000 die.

The Chinese never mentioned a specific death toll and Lomnitz never asked for one. "I fear it will be a long time until they say," he said. But neither did the officials seize numerous opportunities to minimize the death total or to deny previous published estimates of at least 655,000 fatalities in a matter of seconds on that July night.

Additionally the Lomnitzes learned the following:

- Just before the earthquake, the sky over Tangshan lit up "like daylight," waking thousands who thought their room lights had been turned on. The multi-hued lights, mainly white and red, were seen up to 200 miles away.
- One-half mile from the fault line, which ran north-northeast and south-southwest, one field of corn the size of an airport was completely knocked over as if by some giant wind. Leaves on many nearby trees were burned to a crisp and growing vegetables were scorched onone side as if by some mammoth fireball.
- The subterranean movement wrenched the earth surface several feet apart, in some places moving fences, for instance, up to 1.53 metres (5 feet) out of line.
- The earthquake shock itself came with terrific suddenness. One can describe it as "a huge jolt from below" that knocked many people up against their ceiling. In Tangshan, which was directly over the quake epicentre, people clinging desperately to trees or posts were swung completely around by the swaying earth. Thousands of structures collapsed simultaneously.
- Thousands of sinkholes; looking like large bomb craters, appeared. Trees were snapped off or uprooted. Railroad tracks became tangled wreckage. Rockslides were numerous.

"There's no doubt the Chinese are predicting earthquakes," Lomnitz said. "The West has a lot to learn. The Chinese missed on the last one, but they realize the rapidly increasing hazards of earthquakes in a modern world with an increasing populace and increasing investments of powerlines, factories, irrigation works and nuclear power plants.

"The risk of catastrophe is growing. But the Chinese are first to admit the art of prediction is as yet a very primitive one."

Edmonton Mother Jailed

EDMONTON (CP) — A 30-year-old mother of two, who turned to crime to support her heroin addiction has been jailed for four months in provincial court.

Donna Gail Harrison admitted five counts of forgery, one of false representation and one of having another's credit card.

Judge C. A. Kosowan placed Harrison on probation for three years and ordered her to pay back $515.44 obtained by the crimes.

He said it seemed when Harrison wanted the drug she had to go and commit crimes.

Harrison's lawyer Gerry De Bow said his client was now responding to methodone treatment and had been able toa maintain employment at the University of Alberta.

VERBAL BATTLE RAGES OVER CALIF. REDWOODS

EUREKA, Calif. (Reuter) — The tallest trees in the world, the California coastal redwoods are the prize in a bitter struggle pitting environmentalists against the declining lumber industry.

The Carter administration in April proposed a $411-million plan to enlarge Redwood National Park by 48,000 acres, rehabilitate cut-over land and find jobs for an estimated 1,100 people who would be thrown out of work in the woods.

The lumber companies howled—just one virgin old-growth redwood can yield 40,000 board-feet of lumber. At as much as $1.50 for a retail board-foot, such a centuries-old tree can be worth $60,000.

The companies and their allies contend that expansion is unnecessary for the 58,000-acre park, a tenuous necklace of primeval redwood groves girding the northernmost California coast.

They say enough redwood trees are protected already, that expansion will cause economic havoc in a region already beset by 14-per-cent unemployment, among the country's highest, and that it all infringes upon their private property rights.

Those ranged against them, environmentalists, students, fishermen and some public officials, argue that the present park is woefully unprotected since clear-cut logging—sawing down every tree in a wide swath and removing them with tractors—is going on right up to the park boundary.

This, they say, silts up once pristine streams and destroys their valuable salmon resource, degrades the park experience with chainsaw and tractor noise and threatens the park's jewel—the tall-trees grove.

The trees, and the promise or threat of park expansion, are the prime topics in this rugged, sparsely populated region known as the redwood empire, where four-fifths of the land is forest and lumber overwhelmingly dominates the economy.

One 62-year-old mill worker blamed the problem on "environmentalists, rich bitches and nature babies who don't care about us sliver-pickers."

Yet, even without an enlarged park, work in the lumber industry is drying up. Automation in the mills has sharply reduced employment over the last decade.

EXECUTIONS STAYED

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — Three men facing death in the electric chair have been granted stays of execution by the Nebraska Supreme Court. The scheduled executions of convicted murderers Charles Simants, Richard Dean Holtan and John Edward Rust were delayed Wednesday until further notice. The executions had been scheduled for a five-day period in late June and early July.

Canada Post Postes Canada

How serious are we about improving mail service?

This serious!

...serious enough to deliver these Postal Code information kits to over seven million addresses in Canada.

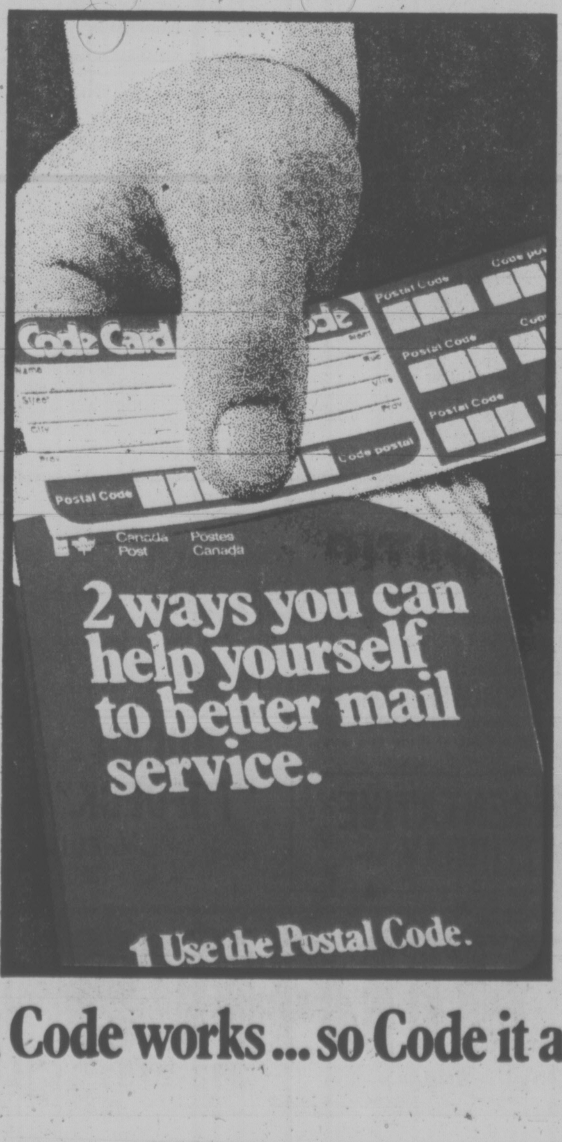
...serious enough to ask you to cooperate in improving mail service by using your kit and 'dial-a-code' to help make it easier to address mail correctly, using Postal Codes.

Why are we doing all this?

Because electronically monitored equipment, controlled by skilled personnel, can handle correctly addressed, coded mail more smoothly and quickly.



No one's going to try to convince you that an improved mail service will happen overnight. But increased use of Postal Codes, by everyone, is a big step in the right direction.

In providing you with Postal Code information kits and 'dial-a-code', we're providing you with tools to improve mail service.

But what good are tools if they're not used?

*
Up to July 31st, 1977, you can dial free for any three Postal Codes in Canada.
Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta Residents dial:
1-800-261-6362
British Columbia Residents dial:
112-800-261-6362

The Postal Code works...so Code it and Post it.

Press Timid: Editor

By AB KENT
Times Staff

Canada's press practises self-censorship and is timid about revealing the skeletons in closets of public figures, Victoria Times editor George Oake told broadcast news editors Thursday.

Oake, who today leaves his post at the Times for a new job in Ottawa, appeared with Vancouver Sun columnist Alan Fotheringham, Human Rights Commission member Larry Ryan and Conservative leader Scott Wallace at a meeting of Broadcast News Ltd. regional representatives in the Empress Hotel.

They discussed what standards the press should have in reporting on figures in public life and concluded, with some reservations, that anyone in the public eye or members of his family are fair game.

Fotheringham made the point that the British and U.S. press broke the stories leading up to separation of the Trudeaus, not Canada's home press, which only did cautious follow-up stories based on those published abroad.

"It's interesting that she (Margaret Trudeau) told eight (Canadian) reporters about her husband slugging her, and none of them said anything about it," Fotheringham said.

Oake said newspapers make arbitrary decisions when dealing with public figures in matters of taste and policial discretion, but are conservative, reflecting "the counter-revolutionary culture, if you like."

He said people are treated according to "old ethics" because most news editors are from a generation which takes its standards from the early post-war period.

But people today are curious and want to know about the human failings of elected and other prominent people. "It is not up to us to make a moral judgment," Oake said.

He also wondered about the "poor guy hurt in an accident and we show his picture all covered in blood being carried away. Are we invading his privacy?

"What about Maureen McTeer and Joe Clarke? Are we invading their privacy when we show them asleep on their plane with his head on her shoulder?"

What about hypocrisy asked a delegate from the floor, referring to News of The World (Great Britain) and People magazine (U.S.) coverage of Canadian events ignored at home.

Fotheringham asked whether it should be reported when a member of the legislature or Parliament appears drunk in the House.

"Yes," Wallace replied.

"If you are going to be in public life and are drunk in the House you have to be prepared to take the responsibility."

Wallace said he does not agree there is much hyprocrisy. Subject matter may be in poor taste, but in a "dog-eat-dog world" and the competitive business of news-gathering, he said he cannot see how the press had any option but to publish.

If a reporter has the initiative to ask Margaret Trudeau whether she smoked pot and she said she did, "there's no way in the world it won't get out," Wallace said.

Someone on the floor said he didn't think anyone cared any more about Margaret or Maureen.

"If no one cares any more, we should be free to report anything," Oake said. But he asked how there could be any discussion of ethics when the government itself invades privacy, as it did when the War Measures Act was invoked in 1970.

Dealing with publication of rumors, Fotheringham said there are things that can't be printed in good taste, or at the risk of bringing down the wrath of readers.

Wallace said when he went into politics he told his wife she could be as involved as much or as little as she liked, and she chose to keep out of the public eye as much as possible.

It was therefore unfair to "drag in the wife and kids unless they voluntarily talk to the press."

And commenting on the public's curiousity, he added:

"Surely it is getting to the bottom of the barrel, ethically when you are just trying to satisfy people's curiousity. It seems a low-level goal for professional news people."

"Our credibility suffers if we don't report things connected with public figures," said Fotheringham, citing the risk of being accused of cover-up or protecting an individual in public life.

Minister Branded Elegant Failure

The "elegant failure" of Communications Minister Jeanne Sauve was blamed Thursday for the lack of direction in Canada's communications policy.

Don M. Hamilton, president of Broadcast News Ltd., spoke briefly at a regional meeting of BN representatives from across B.C. at the Empress Hotel.

Hamilton, who is vice-president of Moffatt Communications Ltd. and general manager of Vancouver radio station CKLG, said the industry is "leaderless in the person of Mme. Sauve," who is nonetheless elegant in Dior dresses and fluent in both languages.

He said communications policy was being traded off for Autopact, Time Magazine and Macleans, among other things.

Communications in Canada are not in good shape, Hamilton said, but he added later he did not know what will be done about it, He did not expect Broadcast News to make an overt move because it is not a policy-making body.

Hamilton said he spoke not so much as president of BN, but to express his concern as a braodcaster and citizen.

He said there is lack of direction in federal communications policy, a lot of confusion and a lot of conflict.

He cited "open and visible conflict between Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission and the minister," for example in matters affecting cable television and pay-YV, which are now before the CRTC.

BN is a news gathering and disseminating agency for radio and television broadcasters and is wholly owned by Canadian Press, a news wire service co-operative of daily newspapers.

Earlier, delegates held an informal discussion with RCMP second-in-command for B.C., Chief Superintendent Gordon Dalton, on communications between the police, news media and public.

Dalton recognized there are problems of communication with the press and the force has taken steps to correct this in a general way, leaving much of the day-to-day situations to the judgment of local detachment officers.

He cited occasions when the police had invited reporters and radio newsmen to semi-social demonstratrions of breathalyzer equipment, which had helped the press people understand police procedures and offered an opportunity to meet more policemen.

But he suggested the broadcasters do something similar for police, to invite them to see how they run their operations and give them some appreciation of the problems of news-gathering.

"Our guys don't know who you guys are," Dalton said, referring to the calls made by various reporters to local detachments or headquarters in the course of a day.

"They don't know who you represent, your chain of command, how a story is handled, who edits it . . . They don't understand who you are and what your job is."

He reminded the meeting that since last Nov. 1 there have been two Victoria-based liaison officers for press information, Superintendent George Scott and Insp. Bruce Terkelsen, who are ready to assist on obtaining information if reporters run into obstacles.

Meanwhile, to improve public communications, Dalton said the force is considering establishment of centres across the province that would maintain radio or telephone contact with a detachment or patrol car at any given time.

This would eliminate gaps that now occur when a smaller detachment closes for normal public purposes at night and on weekends.

Azaleas and Rhodos: Pamper Them

this week removing the young seed capsules from azaleas and rhododendrons. The two names are used by most gardeners to distinguish the shrubs of the rhodo family which drop their leaves in fall from those remaining evergreen, yet the division has no real validity.

As a convenience we use azalea for plants such as Azalea mollis and A. kurume.

The mollis azaleas are somewhat rangy as they grow older and will bear a little careful shortening at this time. But first notice their habit of making a lot of completely new growth from soil level. This will be hardened into flowering branches in a couple of years so that pruning back the present tall growth can be done if desired.

These branches from which the seed capsules are being removed will again produce flower buds this fall for the next spring display.

Because some of it is rangy and rather gaunt I have cut back to where new leaves have expanded lower down on the same older branches.

Some gardeners would not put so much time on these quite ordinary azaleas, but I'm a bit soft on them having raised them from seed and been lucky enough to get a half dozen good plants each a little different shade of color from yellow to flame-orange.

One tablespoon of acid-mix fertilizer (for acid loving plants only) was given in mid-May to each azalea and each rhododendron. It needed soaking-in by gentle water pressure for there was little real rainfall in this area until the last day of the month.

The rhododendrons which have finished blooming for this year have had the same attention of seed capsule removal and fertilizer.

A seedling plant of R. Aberconwayi now 10 years old from seed, was covered this year with delightful pink buds opening to pure white. I have now removed the seed capsules by cutting the stem holding each cluster of five or six, being careful not to harm the tiny growth bud at the base of each stem.

Noticeable while doing this job are the fine new leaf growths already on the tips of branches which did not bear flowers this year. These will produce next year.

A smaller seedling plant from the same batch is quite different in appearance of leaf and flower; it bore a few fine trusses of white buds opening to pure white flowers which I believe is nearer to the parent R. Aberconwayi.

Still another seedling, of different parentage, opened its first blooms this week from dark crimson buds developing into a lovely soft pink inside. As sometimes happens, though it shouldn't, the label has become unreadable so this rhodo must be loved for itself alone, without a name.

In the early results of flowering I find results more than repay the care given these pampered pets, and recommend the same care be given by all home gardeners who have only a few of these lovely ornamental shrubs.

I THINK

That when you look into what I have to offer you'll agree that it's pointless to tie up any more capital than is absolutely necessary. I offer a 3-bedroom, ensuite, plumbing, modern home, low price of $28,400.

DEAN PARK

INVEST WITH A VIEW TO THE FUTURE.

Of the Gulf waters. The Islands. Magnificent Mount Baker.
Nothing but the season can change it.

That's why a home site at Dean Park Estates will grow in value over the years.
Come and grow with us.

But don't delay. Well over 1-3 of our 116 home sites are already sold.
Come and see the activity that's already underway. Take a scenic drive and see what the people with an eye to the future have chosen as an investment.

We're open for talking from 11-7 p.m. and open for viewing 24 hours a day.
All lots 1-3 acre priced from $33,500.

308-A CARDS OF THANKS

The family of the late Donovan James Pike gratefully acknowledges the many beautiful expressions of sympathy extended during our recent bereavement — the cards, floral tributes, and donations to the Heart Fund.

We appreciate the many calls and offers of help by friends and neighbors.

Thank you to the Rev. Harry Silvester for his words of comfort; to Don's shipmates who served as Honorary Pallbearers; Chiefs and PO's Association; Emergency unit at HMC Dockyard, Victoria General Hospital Emergency staff, and the Victoria City Police. Mrs. Daisy Dearden, Jenny Pike, Jim and Robin, Susan and Mrs. Shirley Hall.

309 IN MEMORIAM

SHEPHERD — James Gordon (Jim) beloved son of Mrs. Phyllis Vye, who passed away June 3, 1971.

Deeply and sadly missed. "God Bless You, Dear." — Mom

TALBOT — Ethel, Beatrice.

Days of sadness still come o'er us,
Tears in silence often flow,
Memory keeps you ever near us,
Though you died two years ago.
—Lovingly, husband and family.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD, AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEAR'S CONDEMN, AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.

WITH GRATITUDE, SANDS

HOW TO WRITE
A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale: start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your adveertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday calls. Don't allow the reader to speculate

People Watcher Given $4,280

OTTAWA (CP) — Ken Low, a Calgary psychologist, has received a $4,280 Canada Council grant for, among other things, watching people watch others.

He is to conduct a study of how the public uses pedestrian malls and promenades, and other public meeting areas in Canadian communities.

The grant is one of 105 totalling $508,061 made by the council to encourage investigation into new forms of expression in the arts, and into historical events which have shaped Canadian society.

The Belfry Cultural Centre in Victoria received $7,000 to prepare a Gilles Vigneault Musical in English, in which the widely-known French-Canadian poet and singer will assist.

There were 527 applications for grants submitted before last Dec. 1 and new applications must be submitted before next Dec. 1.

The council's announcement said that Low, who specializes in environmental design, will visit existing malls and promenades and study proposals being made by planning departments in other communities for what he calls "convivial congregation areas."

He believes people gather in such places to talk, eat, watch other people, listen to music, and generally pursue what the council calls "a high quality experience outside their working life."

The council said Low's study will help promote "a better understanding of this important part of our popular culture, to improve general city planning and the design of shopping areas, parks and recreation facilities."

Robert Zeigler, of Halifax, received $4,000 to work in mime with deaf students and adults to create a theatrical presentation which he calls "the poetry of silence."

Pierre Hamel of Montreal, an urban planner, received $8,000 to hold a series of workshops with community groups and to prepare a guide to citizen's action on subjects such as housing, rents, urban renewal, and shortages of social services facilities.

National Debts Rising

TORONTO (CP) — Another year older and deeper in debt could well be the theme song for the Canadian consumer.

Statistics show Canadians spend more than they earn, about $22 billion more this year resulting in debts 16.4 per cent deeper than last year.

Easy credit makes for easy buyers. Canadians buy cars, color television sets, fly-now, pay-later holidays and other extras their salaries won't cover.

It's not that debtors are poor, according to figures from the Metro Toronto Credit Counselling Service. The public counselling service is supported by the federal and provincial governments, industry, union, credit unions and public contributions.

George Penfold, executive director of the service, said the average debtor earns about $15,000 a year and owes about half, more than $7,000, to creditors.

In one out of every 10 cases, debtors who earn just enough to meet their living costs succeed in having their credit payments temporarily suspended, said Penfold.

In 1976, about 1,800 persons sought counselling. Penfold said 40 per cent worked out a prorated system by which they paid a fixed monthly sum to the service which distributes funds to various creditors.

In other instances, the service managed to have creditors forego interest payments, or had finance companies limit interest payments to their own cost of borrowing, one per cent a month.

About 1,500 appealed to the referee of York County's small claims courts last year for relief in meeting creditors' demands or garnishment orders against their salaries. Their debts range from a few hundred dollars to $30,000 per person.

Garnishments, court orders to turn over wages to a creditor, are restricted to 30 per cent of wages. Penfold said the percentage is too high for many debtors.

He said a worker earning $150 a week could have $45 docked from his salary, and that will leave him less able to keep up with his debts.

If there is evidence of undue pressure in selling or of harassment by collectors, the counselling service refers clients to legal aid or to federal and provincial government consumer offices.

Penfold said high interest rates are a problem, but most crushing debt problems result from a chain of circumstances.

Sex Won't Do for Contraceptives in Britain

LONDON (Reuter) — If sex can be used in Britain to sell cars, beer and cigarettes, why can't it be used to sell contraceptives?

The question is asked by an angry young woman in a new booklet, Advertising and Contraceptives, in which Suzie Hayman criticizes the media for apparent prudery in the face of changing opinions in the rest of the world.

"In a society where seven out of 10 teen-age brides are pregnant and where each year 20,000 teen-agers have illegitimate babies and approximately 250,000 children are born unplanned and often unwanted, have we the right to be embarrassed about contraception?" she asks.

Miss Hayman, information officer at a leading family planning organization, is attacking British attitudes which make it difficult to get even the most tasteful and low-key messages regarding contraception and family planning into newspapers and on to television and posters. She feels that the sort of lively upbeat messages that would reach young people are effectively ruled out completely.

The Independent Broadcasting Authority (IBA), with over-all responsibility for the output of commercial radio and television, classes contraceptives with "smoking cures, products for the treatment of hemorrhoids, slimming clinics and clinics for the treatment of hair and scalp" and bans the lot, Miss Hayman notes.

IBA Chairman Lady Plowden wrote to a birth control clinic that "there is no doubt in our minds that the commercial advertising of contraceptives would be felt to be offensive by a large section of the public."

The medical periodical General Practitioner recently asked the IBA what polls they had taken to back up this opinion, and were told, "We have done no research on this topic. We don't feel we need to."

Ferry Passengers Plucked from Ice

HALIFAX (CP) — Passengers and crew from the CN ferry William Carson were being taken to St. Anthony and St. John's, Nfld., today after the vessel was ripped open by an iceberg and sent to the bottom off the Labrador coast.

No injuries or loss of life were reported by CN or search and rescue officials.

They said 128 passengers and crew were plucked from ice floes and lifeboats by helicopters and the icebreaker Sir Humphrey Gilbert after the Willian Carson went down just north of the Strait of Belle Isle.

However, the number of persons aboard the Carson on her first northward voyage of the season fluctuated several times in reports from CN and rescue officials.

They said the confusion was because only the purser of the ship—the man who sells tickets to those who have not purchased them in advance—knows for sure how many persons may have boarded at points along the ship's route.

The purser, H. Reddick of Mount Pearl, a St. John's suburb, was among 86 persons taking the Sir Humphrey Gilbert early today and was not available for comment. The ship was en route to St. Anthony.

Officials at CN Marine headquarters at Moncton, N.B., said they assumed on the basis of the message that the Sir Humphrey Gilbert was making for port that the number aboard the Carson had been checked with the purser.

At one point, CN reported the Carson carried 110 persons, 88 crew members and 22 passengers. Later they raised the crew figure to 90 and said the total was "about 125."

Meanwhile, a Canadian Forces Tracker aircraft continued to sweep the area where the Carson went down about 18 miles off the Labrador coast. A spokesman said it was a routine procedure and that they had no reason to believe anybody was missing.

Bronfman Crams French

The president of The Seagram Co. Ltd. and co-owner of the Montreal Expos baseball club was enrolled in the course at the Institute Linguistique de Jonquiere, a distinguished language-training centre.

Bronfman, who vowed on the eve of the Nov. 15 provincial election that he would pull his distillery company out of Quebec if the Parti Quebecois won, had a special reason for boning up on his French.

Denis Tremblay, director of the language institute, said Seagram is planning a major promotion across Quebec during the coming months, and Bronfman will be one of the main particippants in the campaign.

West MPs Fear Massive Spills

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Progressive Conservative MPs warned Thursday of massive West Coast oil spills following the collapse of a pipeline proposal to ship Alaskan oil to the mid-West United States.

Without the pipeline, Alaska crude oil would be shipped down the West Coast in tankers, posing a "massive environmental threat," Benno Friesen (PC—Surrey-White Rock) told the Commons.

His comments came in the wake of a decision by Kitimat Pipe Line Ltd. to withdraw an application for an oil-bearing pipeline from Kitimat to Edmonton and on to the United States.

External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson agreed that the decision probably will lead to increased oil tanker trafiic along the West Coast.

Canada has been discussing with the U.S. alternative methods of moving Alaska crude, and will continue to do so, he said.

Prince George, meanwhile, stands to lose 500 jobs, revenue from another 800 workers and a share of $25 million to be spent on heavy equipment if the Kitimat-to-Edmonton pipeline is cancelled ,a consultant for the company which studied the pipeline proposal said Thursday.

Dave Ross said that during peak construction the pipeline would have about 1,400 workers in the Prince George area and of these about 500 likely would be hired from the city.

Ross said that the city would benefit not only from the wages paid to city workers on the line, but from those living anywhere in the region.

Prince George would serve as major distribution and supply centre for pipeline construction, he said.

Envoy Switch Approved

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Breaking a 16-year chill, the United States and Cuba have agreed to exchange middle-rank diplomats, a State Department spokesman said today.

"We have reached an agreement with Cuba on exchanging diplomatic interest sections," spokesman John Trattner said.

The exchange is another indication of warming relations between the two nations, although today's action falls far short of the full diplomatic recognition missing since President Eisenhower severed relations a few days before he left office in 1960.

JET STUNT PILOT DIES

PARIS (AP) — A U.S. jet fighter plane crashed and burned today before thousands of spectators at Le Bourget airport on the opening day of the Paris Air Show. The pilot, Howard Nelson, died en route to hospital, officials said.

The plane, a Fairchild A10 crashed while performing acrobatic manoeuvres. Witnesses said the anti-tank attack plane was coming out of a loop when the tail and wings fell off.

CANADIAN DOLLAR SKIDDING

OTTAWA (UPI) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Thursday he was not concerned about heavy trading that sliced 0.8 of a cent off the Canadian dollar and pushed it to a low of 94.0 U.S. cents.

"I am not particularly distressed by the rate at the present time," Macdonald said.

By now today in Montreal, the Canadian dollar was trading at $.948 (U.S.).

New York dealers said the slide might be due to conversions of Canadian dollars to make payment on foreign debts, but Macdonald declined to speculate on what he believed had caused the sudden fall.

BASIC MINING POLICY

Socreds Keeping Coal Royalties

Times News Services

NELSON — The provincial government will keep the existing $1.50-a-ton royalty on coal, Premier Bennett said Thursday in a major coal policy statement.

"This policy establishes a framework within which this vital natural resource will be developed for the maximum benefit of all British Columbians," Bennett said after a cabinet meeting.

He predicted coal will eventually out-rank the lumber industry in providing employment, resource revenue and taxation. The new policy is aimed at ensuring that coal development is carried out by private enterprise with the government providing an investment climate and the port facilities.

"This government believes that it is absolutely essential that we define for the industry and the public the steps to be taken for responsible management of this resource," Bennett said. "The government also realizes that its policies must be consistent and predictable to create investors' confidence."

Bennett described the policy as the most important resource announcement that the Social Credit government has made and is likely to make for the next two or three years.

Mines Minister Jim Chabot said the policy, which ends months of speculation, will bring stability to the industry, opening the way for new development in the northeast and southeast sectors of B.C.

Key points in the policy include:

—Reserving to B.C. the right to meet its coal needs first.

—Setting up a new system of grant licences, which will incorporate competitive tendering while not affecting existing or currently-planned development.

—Making coal development consistent with over-all provincial energy, economic, environmental, regional and social objectives.

Protesters In Nelson Shove Bennett

NELSON (CP) — Premier Bennett was pushed several times Thursday as he walked through a crowd of 200 demonstrators on his way into the Nelson provincial office building.

Stores in the city's business distict were closed in support of the demonstrators who paraded down the city's main street.

The demonstrators, demanding a degree-granting university for this city, chanted "don't let him in," and blocked the premier's path into the building for about five minutes.

The crowd moved back to let Bennet pass at the request of a union official from Kootenay Forest Products. City police trying to protect the premier were unable to reach him.

A coalition of business, labor and student groups had organized for several weeks to present a clear demand for a degree-granting university during the cabinet visit.

Education Minister Pat McGeer announced earlier this week that only a first and second-year university program would be available at Nelson's Notre Dame University this fall.

At a luncheon address Thursday, Bennett said the decision to curtail the university's program had been a difficult one which his government was not afraid to face "head-on."

Feeling in the town ran high from the beginning of the day. About 300 people, some carrying placards, jogged with Bennett in the morning and protestors later confronted McGeer outside a hotel and demanded resumption of the four-year university program this fall.

Moluccan Mediators Picked

ASSEN (AP) — Dutch officials and South Moluccan extremists agreed today on the names of two mediators to try to negotiate an end to twin sieges in the northern Netherlands, a government spokesman said.

But Wim van Leeuwen of the justice ministry said the proposed mediators have not yet agreed to serve as go-betweens to free the 60 or so hostages held on a commuter train and in a school.

Van Leeuwen did not identify the proposed mediators or reveal their nationalities.

The agreement followed a meeting earlier today in the Dutch capital, The Hague, between government officials and a delegation of Moluccan leaders, including Pieter Willem Lokollo, vice-president of the self-styled South Moluccan government-in-exile.

Earlier this week the government rejected the names of two South Moluccans proposed by the terrorists.

Fort Nelson BCR Link Will Remain: Socred

FORT NELSON (CP) — The government of British Columbia is committed to maintaining the B.C. Railway extension between Fort St. John and this northern community, legislature speaker Ed Smith said Thursday.

Smith, Social Credit MLA for Peace River North, said on an open-line radio program that "the government has no intention of abandoning or deserting rail services" between the two points.

Alan Richmond, B.C. Rail's chief engineer, told the Royal Commission into the railway's operation that he has almost as many men attempting to maintain traffic over the 250-mile extension opened in 1971 as he has on the remaining 450 miles.

He said problems are caused by such engineering flaws as poorly selected material for the grade, improperly conducted winter work, undersized subgrades and inadequate drainage studies.

The White Pass and Yukon Corp., which also testified at the inquiry now under way in Vancouver, said this link and the extension to Dease Lake should be scrapped to save the railway from economic doom.

Meanwhile, a former Railwest executive has charged that the BCR management hampered operations of the doomed Railwest rail car plant in Squamish to such an extent that Railwest was plagued with delays and unnecessary expenses.

Harold Edmonds also said the railway gave such poor assistance when Railwest opened in 1975 that workers once threatened to stop work after they found errors in payroll cheques prepared by B.C. Rail accounting facilities.

Edmonds, Railwest's finance manager until December, 1976, told the Royal Commission "the manufacturing of rail cars is nearly as distinctive from railroading as law is from medicine."

El Dorado in Highway Cut a Clerk's Error

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Many's the greenhorn prospector whose visions of parading dance-hall girls and an eternal supply of Redeye have vanished in the essay office.

It's not very often it happens the other way around, however, as it did recently to George Dubinsky of Nanaimo.

A Calgary assay laboratory made an error that sent Dubinsky reeling with dreams of a rich silver mine, although he says deep down he knew all along it was too good to be rue.

Dubinsky is a powder man working for a contracting firm charged with blasting out a bluff ffor the widening o the Island Highway six miles north of Duncan near the foot of Mount Sicker.

Dubinsky is also an experienced miner, and he knows his ores.

So when th esmoke cleared from one of his roadside blasts exposing the tell-tale peacock turquoise, he thought he better stake in the area just in case another major copper discovery was in the offing.

A while later a Calgary-based salesman for a major oil company and personal friend happened to drive by, and Dubinsky told him of his claim.

The salesman said he had a geologist friend working for the oil company in Calgary that would do an assay for him, so Dubinsky gave him a sample.

"The next thing Dubinsky knew, he was being wooed by the mineral exploration department of the oil company.

It seems the oil company sent the sample to a laboratory, and the lab reported back the ore assayed out at 38 ounces of silver to the ton.

"At 38 ounces to the ton, it wouldn't take a hell of a lot of ore to make a paying silver mine," said a chemist with the analytical lab of the provincial mineral resources branch.

The bubble burst when the lab rechecked its calculations and discovered it had copied down the wrong figures and that the true silver content was .26 ounces per ton.

Dubinsky said he couldn't see how anyone could make such an error, but he didn't believe the first assay anyway.

The lab wrote him a letter of apology, and the oil company wrote saying it was no longer interested in his prop- longer interested in his property.

"I'm not going to get rich on this one," he said showing remarkabley good humor.

And so the story ends, almost.

Gold showed up at .12 ounces per ton and there is some copper. If the deposit is big enough, it might support a mine.

A mine could, however, produce its own difficulties. A spokesman for the highways department said a similar find occurred once before and the construction worker-turned-miner had to pay for the relocation of the highway.

A setback like Dubinsky's might have been a heartbreaker for the old-time prospector needing a grubstake and facing another lonely stint in the back country.

Dubinsky may not have his silver mine, but he's still got his $10.23 an hour job with the blasting crew.

But as one long-forgotten placer-miner scratched on the wall of his log cabin: "It's better to have staked and lost, than not to have staked at all."

It's a tight, tight squeeze for this naval reservist

THE PATRIOTS

Albert Head 'Ghost Town' Springs to Life

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

We drive up to the gate.

We look down the barrel of a rifle.

We stop.

The young woman behind the gun isn't fooling.

Until now the 500 acres at Albert Head, owned by the national defence department, has been a "ghost town" says Patriot's commanding officer, Lieut. Don Arnaud.

Originally built as a coastal gun site at the beginning of the Second World War, the army has occasionally used it for field craft training and the navy, as a grenade range.

He said the reservists with rifles are being assessed for their ability to throw up roadblocks and patrol for enemy. It's all part of a program to teach military skills, leadership and discipline.

The day starts early — at 5:45 a.m. — running an obstacle course that's not for the timid.

"We're not just taking a bunch of citizens and making sailors out of them . . . playing a little game," said Arnaud.

He explains that part of the training is aimed at teaching the reservists to get along with other people.

Jealousy Caused Saanich Shooting

Jealousy was the motive for a Saanich shooting incident early Thursday that left one man dead and two others wounded, Saanich police Insp. Robin Stewart said today.

Stewart said Wayne Gundrum, 32, who died of a rifle wound to his head, was distraught over breaking up with Robin Lee Clarke and was jealous she was seeing his close friend and roommate Kenneth Paul Wilke.

Stewart said a police investigation has determined Gundrum went to Mrs. Clarke's house at 4031 Hollydene at about 5 a.m. attempted to murder her and Wilke, then took his own life.

One was found at his home at 1521 Cedar Glen, the other was in his pocket when police discovered his body in the bathroom of the Hollydene house.

Coroner Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre will conduct an inquiry into the death.

Wilke was shot in the arm and broke his ankle and cut tendons in his leg when he leapt through a bedroom window to get away from his assailant.

Mrs. Clarke was shot in the back of her shoulder while running down a hallway trying to flee the house.

Wilke staggered half a mile to get help while Mrs. Clarke made it to a car and drove herself to hospital.

Wilke and Gundrum were former rugby teammates. They played on first division University of Victoria and Castaways rugby teams.

Wilke is regarded as one of the top rugby players in Canada.

Ask The Times

Q. What years did some of the Eastern states in the U.S. celebrate Thanksgiving on a different date than the rest of the country? How many states were involved. — P.J.L.

A. The first holiday celebration was held by the Plymouth colony in December, 1621, and early American colonies held thanksgiving celebrations in recognition of any happy event such as good harvests and victories over the Indians. In 1789 President George Washington issued the first presidential thanksgiving proclamation in honor of the new constitution. During the 19th century, more and more states observed the day annually, each appointing its own date. President Abraham Lincoln on Oct. 3, 1863, proclaimed the last Thursday in November as Thanksgiving, and President Franklin D. Roosevelt made that day a national public holiday.

Workers Still Leave Despite Job Boost

By AL FORREST
Times Staff

The number of jobs available in Victoria is growing but not enough to stem the outward flow of workers, Canada Manpower regional manager Stan Purdy said today.

"We will continue to lose more people than we gain for some time. These conditions will continue at least until the end of the year."

Purdy was commenting on a report by Victoria movers that 100 families move out for every 40 that move in.

"We have been warning people of this for months but it has been difficult to get people to listen," Purdy said.

"We have been saying that Victoria must make a concerted effort to attract new industries and to promote the tourist industry."

Purdy said the Victoria office of Canada Manpower has already spent 75 per cent of its budget in the mobility program after only two months.

"These funds will be all gone by mid-June," he said.

The money is used to assist families to move to areas where work is guaranteed. Many Victorians have been moving to Alberta.

Purdy said the workers being lost are all skilled. No unskilled workers are moved through the mobility program because there is no shortage of unskilled workers in other market areas.

The result, he said, is that Victoria is being left with a large pool of unskilled workers.

If the economy suddenly improves, he said, Victoria could find itself with a serious shortage of skilled workers for essential jobs.

The outlook is not entirely gloomy, however, he said.

For example, 1,370 jobs came into the Victoria office of Canada Manpower in May, up from 934 in April.

And on the first day of June there were 57 new jobs posted on the board, up from a normally daily average of about 20 to 24.

The jobs came from all types of economic sectors but mainly employers were looking for people in the hospitality industry. There was a slight increase in employment at the local shipyards as well, with 340 being on staff, up from 300 in April.

But employment continues to sag in the construction industry.

Latest figures for the Victoria area show there is a working age population of 174,000, consisting of all people 15 and over. Of this total, there are 102,000 in the work force with 92,000 of them being unemployed.

The unemployment rate continues to be around 10 per cent.

Purdy said while jobs continue to be fairly scarce in Victoria, some vacancies have been on the books for more than one month.

These are jobs that are highly skilled or unattractive to large numbers of people.

The unattractive jobs are mainly housekeepers and live-in domestics who may earn only $350 per month plus room and board.

There are about 30 unemployed hairdressers in Victoria but none are interested in hairdressing vacancies in Nanaimo, Purdy said.

Some don't want to leave Victoria while others say they would prefer a salaried position and not have to work on a straight commission.

A survey compiled by information director Dan Bowes showed nine million board feet of lumber, four thousand tons of pulp and 150 tons of fish were shipped from the port of Victoria during May.

The British Columbia Forest Products sawmill is operating at three full shifts and is using two full shifts and part of a third in the sawmill.

$10,000 In Loot Recovered

Two juvenile boys arrested early today in connection with six overnight break-ins in the city are suspected in as many as 60 other break-ins in Greater Victoria.

A Victoria police spokesman said officers have found more than $10,000 worth of stolen goods stashed in the boys' homes in Colwood and Victoria.

The goods include a number of calculators, radios and walkie-talkie sets.

The boys, aged 15 and 16, were picked up at 3:30 a.m. after officers spotted them acting suspiciously in the area of Blanshard and Broughton.

The pair tried to run off but were apprehended after a foot chase over several downtown blocks.

Ironically, police were in the area investigating another matter at the time.

Patrol Insp. Doug Grant said a building alarm drew a number of police units into the area.

Altyough the alarm was subsequently found to be false, officers decided to search the area and spotted the juveniles.

Grant said the overnight break-ins were at a restaurant on Blanshard and a group of lawyers' offices on Broughton.

Some cash was taken but police were unable to say how much.

TOWN TALK

Some people who went to see national Conservative leader Joe Clark at the Chamber of Commerce luncheon Thursday have yet to see him.

It was so crowded in the Old Forge, due to a record turnout, that it was difficult to see any of the head table party. Pillars blocked the view of some while other members of the audience were treated to a view of the rear side of three television cameramen.

One woman who stood up said she was trying to seek Clark's wife, Maureen McTeer.

She was told not to waste her energy because McTeer was not present. She was in Vancouver recovering from a mild attack of tonsilitis.

One man commented: "He sounds good. What does he look like?"

However, he was obviously buoyed by the large turnout and joked that many of them may have turned out to check on a report that he was dead, a report which is somewhat exaggerated, he said.

Yet more progress in this enlightened age of public drinking.

If Victoria city council accepts a committee recommendation, thirsty fans at soccer and baseball games in Royal Athletic Park will be able to lubricate their vocal chords with a quick drop of what they fancy — as long as it's beer or cider.

The drinks would be sold during the game, and for half an hour before and after. Presumably the after-game beverage would be for fans wishing to celebrate, or drown their sorrows.

The committee was assured this week by recreation manager Jack Morgan that he foresees no problems with spectators at soccer and baseball games.

Strange, though, nothing was said about extending the privilege to rugby games. Perhaps, in the colorful imagination of bureaucrats, the drinking reputation of rugger types conjures up fearful visions of bacchanalian orgies?

Thirty years ago, Princess Elizabeth was about to be married to young Prince Philip. Gifts were sent from all over the world, including Anacortes, Washington.

The Anacortes Chamber of Commerce was apologetic because the town couldn't afford to send gold or silver or precious stones, so it sent the pride of Puget Sound, a case of tinned sockeye salmon.

Liz wrote back a personal note thanking them for "so acceptable a present" and assuring the chamber the choice was one that gave her pleasure.

Now, in commemoration of Queen's silver jubilee, the Anacortes group sent another case of tinned sockeye, passing along congratulations to her and the "British Empire."

Chamber members say they aren't sure whether the Queen and other members of the Royal Family will taste the salmon, "but maybe the butlers and servants at Buckingham Palace will have a great feast."

The condition of the yew hedge bordering the Fairfield Road side of Ross Bay Cemetery has caught the eye of some passers-by, who are apparently wondering whether the hedge is dying.

As for those ragged patches and gaps in the foliage, Smith says they're the unfortunate result of at least three motor vehicle accidents in recent years, which have left the hedge looking "a little miserable."

Chief Superintendent Gordon Dalton had so much fun reading quotes from old accident reports to Broadcast News editors Thursday he could hardly get the words out.

"The guy was all over the road. I had to swerve several times before hitting him."

But the selections looked suspiciously like those collected and published a few years ago by ex-Saanich and Victoria policeman John Adams under the title, Tell it to The Judge.

The French government has granted University of Victoria faculty member Dr. Michael Ashwood-Smith the status of professor in French universities.

Ashwood-Smith, one of six foreigners selected, will be a year at the University of Dijon researching and lecturing.

He also recently received a federal grant for his research in marine microbiology.

Pipeline Stocks In Lead on TSE

The TSE 300 index, spurred by a seven-point advance at New York, was up 2.89 to 984.13 with gains in all four of its most heavily-weighted groups.

Metals and minerals rose 3.80 to 1,034.23, financial services 2.98 to 863.59, oil and gas issues 1.15 to 1,084.69 and industrial products .56 to 893.24.

Management companies and pipeline and utility stocks led the seven gainers among the other 10 groups, while gold and communications and media issues declined. Transportation stocks were unchanged.

Among industrials, Brascan Ltd. A gained ¾ to $13⅛, Inco A ½ to $27⅞, Trans Mountain Pipe Line A ½ to $11½, Bell Canada ½ to $51¾ and Trans-Canada PipeLines ⅛ to $15⅛.

New York

The 2 p.m. Dow Jones average of 30 industrial stocks was up 7.38 at 910.53.

The pace of trading remained sluggish, however. NYSE volume totalled 13.30 million shares as of mid-afternoon.

The Labor Department reported this morning that the wholesale price index rose 0.4 per cent in May for its smallest rise in nine months, while the unemployment rate declined to a 2½-year low of 6.9 per cent.

At the same time, New York's Citibank held its prime lending rate at 6¾ per cent.

Montreal

At Montreal prices were fixed in moderate afternoon trading.

Volume at 2:30 p.m. EDT was 332,900 shares, compared with 290,800 shares traded up to the same time Thursday.

Norcen Energy Resources was off ¼ at $11, Toronto-Dominion Bank ⅛ at $16¼, Seagram Ltd. ⅛ at $21 and Simpson's Ltd. five cents at $4.85. Bell Canada gained ½ at $51¾, Brascan A ⅝ at $13⅛, Westburne International Industries ¼ at $9¾ and Oshawa A 20 cents at $4.95.

London

LONDON (CP) — The London stock market rose moderate Friday near the close of very light trading caused by the upcoming long weekend. Markets will be closed Monday for the Whitsun holiday.

Canadian stocks were unchanged to fractionally lower.

CHICAGO (AP) — Old crop commodity futures in the soybean complex came up against renewed selling pressure on the Board of Trade today as new crop deliveries were being bought.

The trading maneuver, termed spreading or straddling, caused a relatively wide divergence in prices in the complex. Old crop soybeans were down nine cents a bushel while new crop were up 13; the nearby meal was down five dollars a ton and the new crop deliveries were up as much as five dollars.

Old crop oil was about 20 points lower and the new crop 25 or so higher.

Grain prices were steady to about three cents a bushel higher in very slow trade. Iced broilers were narrowly mixed and trade was dull.

The selling of nearby contracts in the complex was, in part, a continuation from Thursday. However, the trade also appeared to react to some disappointing statistics issued overnight. The amount of soybeans processed in the week ended June 1 for meal and oil was lower than the previous week and sharply lower than a year ago.

Demand for corn, wheat and oats futures was led by commercial interests with commission houses on both sides.

Big Roots Project Planned

WASHINGTON — Author Alex Haley says he wants to spend the profits from Roots on correcting the distorted images Africans and Americans have of each other, but first he wants to see how much the taxman leaves him. Many Africans' impression of American blacks come from old movies portraying them as "the grinning, shuffling oaf," while black and white Americans form their impressions of Africans "from Tarzan and Jane and Jungle Jim," he said.

NOTTINGHAM — A dog's visit to a lamp post led to an explosion Thursday and put a nine-year-old boy in hospital. The dog urinated on electrical wiring which had been exposed by vandals at the base of the post where seconds later, Michael Robbins leaned his bicycle. A metal part touched the wet wiring, causing a short-circuit and explosion. The boy was thrown off his bicycle and treated in hospital for burns, grazes and shock. The dog was not hurt.

GEORGETOWN, Colo. — Sheriff Gene Keifer draws the line at making moonshine in the Clear Creek County Jail. Five prisoners recently plugged up a jail-cell sink, the sheriff said, and using apples and oranges they got for desert, bread crust for yeast and sugar given them for coffee, they started brewing a half-gallon batch. They also added a few squirts of toothpaste. A towel was draped over the sink, but the fermenting brew was found during a routine check of the cell. Keifer charged all five prisoners with introducing contraband into the jail. Beyond that, he said, there will be no more apples or oranges for dessert. "Let them eat prunes," he said.

ROME — Italian film director Roberto Rossellini, a founder of the neorealistic film movement after the Second World War, died today at his home, apparently of a heart attack. He was 71.

QUITO — In the first hostile demonstration of Rosalynn Carter's Latin American tour, about 150 students a block away nearly drowned out President Carter's wife as she conferred with Ecuadorean officials. "I heard some noise, but I don't know anything about it," Mrs. Carter said Thursday afternoon as she left the Legislative Palace after a discussion of the military junta's plans to return the Ecuadorean government to civilian control next year. She said she thought it was "a local problem."

WASHINGTON — Former U.S. secretary of state Henry Kissinger has accepted a one-year appointment as a professor in Georgetown University's School of Foreign Service, reliable sources said Thursday.

Ex-Beatle Paul and Linda McCartney are expecting another baby in September, they told reporters at Heathrow Airport on Thursday. "We're expecting another girl," Paul said. "We're used to girls." They have three daughters.

. . . questions

SOLEDAD, Calif. (AP) — Sirhan Sirhan says a return visit to the kitchen of the Ambassador Hotel might help him remember the assassination of Senator Robert Kennedy.

"He keeps trying to visualize it, and he can't," said Sirhan's lawyer, Godfrey Isaac. "He wants to know himself, did he, or did he not kill Senator Kennedy?"

Kenneth Hahn and Baxter Ward travelled to Soledad prison in central California on Thursday at Sirhan's invitation. They were the first officials to question him since he was convicted of the Kennedy killing in 1969.

Sirhan, gun in hand, was grabbed as Kennedy fell in the Ambassador kitchen on June 5, 1968.

Sirhan has insisted ever since that he remembers nothing between the time he entered the hotel to the time he was pinned to a steam table by his captors.

The county board of supervisors has been investigating the Sirhan case for some time, trying to determine whether anyone else might have motivated or helped the Palestinian refugee.

"There is a blank in Sirhan's mind," Hahn said. "If we could uncover that, we might have the clue to many of these mysteries."

Shots Fired At Vesco

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (AP) — A former presidential candidate, wrapped in a red-white-and-blue Costa Rican flag and yelling "I want to die for Costa Rica," fired more than 20 shots Thursday at the home of fugitive American financier Robert Vesco.

Some parked cars were damaged by gunfire but the house was not hit and no one was injured.

Police said Gerardo Wenceslao Villalobos stood behind trees and fired at the millionaire's walled compound with a .38-calibre pistol. Villalobos was booked on charges of attempted homicide and jailed pending arraignment today.

"You do not pay taxes, you are corrupting my country," the 34-year-old Villalobos shouted in full view of television cameras and reporters. "I am alone without bodyguards."

Vesco has been living in Costa Rica about five years as a fugitive from authorities in the U.S., where he is accused of illegally donating about $2 million to former president Richard Nixon's re-election campaign and of embezzling $224 million from the Swiss-based Overseas Investors Fund, an international trust fund.

FM Jubilee Coverage Marks First Trans-Atlantic Hookup

History will be made on June 7 in more ways than one. The date marks the 25th anniversary of Queen Elizabeth II's accession to the throne. And the hour-long coverage of the Queen's Silver Jubilee Thanksgiving from St. Paul's Cathedral, London on CBC-FM will be the first ever stereo link across the Atlantic.

Describing the processional the service and the music will be Tom Earle, who joined CBC News in 1953, and became CBC London correspondent in 1971. Earle, a veteran of Commonwealth affairs, will convey all the pomp and circumstance of this ceremonial occasion.

The trans-Atlantic stereo hookup is another milestone in Canadian communications. Thirty-one years ago the first CBC-FM stations opened in Toronto and Montreal. With Ottawa, these became an experimental FM network in 1960. In November 1975 eight stations from St. John's to Vancouver made up the CBC English FM stereo network (joined by Regina in May, 1977). And in March, 1976, the first CBC stereo simulcast of a TV concert took place on FM.

The June 7th Silver Jubilee Service will be integrated into CBC-FM's The Eric Friesen Show. In the last hour of this music and arts news show on that date (9-10 a.m.) Donna MacDonald interviews the Master of the Queen's Musik, Malcolm Williamson.

That same day, highlights of the Service will be heard on AM at 11:30 a.m. At 9:30 a.m. there will be live coverage of Her Majesty's Message to the Commonwealth from the Guildhall in London. Both broadcasts will be incorporated into CBC Radio's Morningside.

On both newtworks Mostly Music, June 7, 10:20 p.m., (noon, 12:30 p.m. on CBC-FM) offers A Serenade for Queen Elizabeth, hosted by Howard Dyck. The hour-long program is highlighted by the well-known Elizabethan Serenade, Ronald Binge; The Three Elozabeths, Eric Coates; Homage to the Wueen, Malcolm Arnold, as well as works by such eminent British composers as Sir Michael Tippett, Benjamin Britten, Sir William Walton and also Canada's Robert Farnon.

On June 7 Margaret Pacsu's Listen to the Music at 6:30 on FM is devoted to works by the three composers who have held the position of Master of the Queen's Music during the reign of Queen Elizabeth II. They are Sir Arnold Bax, Sir Arthur Bliss, and the present incumbent, Malcolm Williamson.

As its special Jubilee tribute, Opera Theatre Wed. June 8 on FM at 9:04 p.m. presents Benjamin Britten's opera Gloriana based on the story of Elizabeth I and the Earl of Essex. In the cast of this BBC production are Ava June, Jennifer Vyvyan, David Hillman, Don Gerrard, Derek Hammond Stroud, and the Sadler's Wells Chorus and Orchestra, conducted by Charles Mackerras.

Canadian Variety Series On CBC's Prime Time

TORONTO (CP) — The CBC has announced its fall television schedule which gives prime-time spots to two new Canadian variety series.

One of the series features Quebec's teen-age singer Rene Simard. The other, called Canadian Express, will present different variety acts from across the country each week.

Also in the schedule is a new Canadian situation comedy, Custard Pie, which is about four nightclub performers.

The CBC is buying three hours of imported prime-time shows — four new situation comedies and a drama, all from the United States.

The other comedies are On Our Own, the story of two girls trying to succeed as advertising copywriters; We've Got Each Other, in which a woman goes out to work as an office manager while her husband stays home and writes a mail-order catalogue; and Three's Company, based on the British series about two girls and a young man living together.

Also on the schedule are Soundings, which will be a nine-episode series on conservation, and a month of operas in the Musicamera series.

There also will be the first three of seven one-hour dramas on Canada's immigrant history, called The Newcomers, and a number of drama specials.

Stations also will be allowed to develop regional shows.

NORMAN CAMPBELL (left) consults with Sir Tyrone Guthrie (right) on the set of the CBC-TV production of H.M.S. Pinafore, in 1960. Campbell has produced and directed The Unselfish Giant of Stratford, a portrait of Guthrie, who died in 1971, the first artistic director of the Stratford Shakespearean Festival. The Unselfish Giant of Stratford will be seen on CBC-TV Sunday, June 5 at 8 p.m. on the eve of Stratford's 25th anniversary.

CLUES ACROSS:

7. VOCATION not location. Aptly, a sense of VOCATION implies an aim. "Location" is weaker in this respect ("sense of direction" might be nearer the mark).

8. FIDDLE not riddle. A riddle is simply good if you like it; the idea of a (so acknowledged) "very fine old riddle" is doubtful. "FIDDLE" is better.

9. POPPY not puppy. "Hesitate a moment" over a POPPY, yes; but more careful consideration is given when selecting a puppy.

11. GET not bet. The question of national monetary inflation has little direct connection with how much money men bet.

13. SCAR not scab. The clue suits that which is comparable to the surrounding skin, serving the same purpose but differing "in appearance" (SCAR tissue).

16. RING not ding. The subject matter of the clue fits the straightaway RING rather than "ding" which carries a hint of whimsy.

18. MAKE not take. Given that he is very busy, it is probable that time for non-essentials cannot simply be taken, but rather has to be made.

22. SOCK not mock. The clue suggests some question of safety from actual harm. SOCK is the stronger answer, since retaliation to mockery may well be harmless enough.

24. LONG not lone. It is the length of the flight, rather than its solitariness, that links up with the theme of making "history."

25. PERSON not parson. Many a PERSON in quite a general sense, not merely among parsons.

CLUES DOWN:

2. LANDS not sands. It's a matter of the various attractions of the LANDS in question. There is not a lot that brochures can say, or illustrate, simply about the sands in themselves.

3. NINE not fine or pine. The clue's quantitative approach ("in a little park") has special point for NINE. It is a very reasonable idea, in quite a general sense, that fine or pine trees are better not spoilt, so why specify "in a little park"?

4. SNAP not snip. The clue suits something done by the hand, rather than with scissors, etc.

6. SWAYING not staying. Since STAYING out of harm's way can be achieved by excessive retreating (hardly "admirable"), the enthusiastic tone of the clue suits swaying better.

10. PARK nor dark. It is "not unheard of" (i.e., not too surprising an idea) that someone might sleep in the PARK. On the other hand, it is normal to sleep in the dark.

14. FICTION not diction. The question of literacy links up with writing (FICTION) rather than speaking (diction). Also, it is doubtful if anybody is ever "famous" for his diction.

17. SCALP not scald. One regards the scald as being in itself the trouble, rather than something one may have "trouble with." SCALP is more apt in this way.

RETURN TO NATURE

NEW YORK (CP) — Back-to-nature accessories are sprouting all over. Designers from Paris to New York have plucked garden growth and exotic flowers to string in the hair, at the throat, the waist and the wrists. The newest natural product is cultivated in 18- or 24-carat gold and comes in haircombs and necklaces at M. and J. Savitt.

John Hearn's Collectibles

Cameos of the Victorian era and earlier most certainly deserve to rank with the prime collectibles. They have all the qualifications — they were made in vast quantities, they were works of art of varying merit and they are small. You might compare them with Japanese netsuki but I have not heard of them fetching those kind of prices — outside museum specimens, that is.

Modern cameos are stamped out in plastic and are therefore worth very little from the collector's point of view. Until the plastic age, however, each was a hand-carved miniature as examination through a magnifying glass will confirm. They have been made since the earliest times. Materials include lapiz luzuli, amethyst, ruby, agate and sardonyx. The popular material of the Victorian era was shell since it offers a good combination of workable texture, wearability and subtle colors. Subjects were mostly portrait heads, often of famous or classic figures. Value is determined entirely by the fineness of the workmanship.

R. H. Harold of London wants to know more about the Pequegnat of clock fame.

Ullysses Pequegnat (now commonly pronounced "Peginaw") immigrated to Canada in 1874 bringing with him his wife, Francois, their 14 children and the wife of his eldest son, Arthur. Francois could speak a little German, otherwise they were solidly Francophone. On the basis of Francois' second language they settled in Berlin, Ontario (now Kitchener) — and everyone promptly went to work. Arthur opened a jewellery repair store and the other brothers soon followed suit. As a sideline, Arthur went into the bicycle business and began manufacturing fine turn-of-the-century roadsters but around 1904, the bottom fell out of the cycle business and he turned to the making of clocks. Canadian clockmakers had hitherto been individual craftsmen.

Pequegnat's operation was the first Canadian factory as such to specialize in clocks. Company policy was simply to make the best and modern collectors will confirm that they succeeded. Arthur died in 1928 but the plant continued in productions until 1941 when the company was overtaken by the demand for more modern designs — they had not deigned to change their models by so much as a hair in all those years. Only clock specialists can tell a late from an early Pequiegnat; almost the only hint is the use of the name Berlin on the face rather than Kitchener which came later. Early or late, Pequegnat clocks continue to command ever higher prices and very few are in such dilapidated condition as to not be worth repairing.

Robert Blake Angry On and Off Screen

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Robert Blake gets just as angry off screen as he does on, playing tough Tony Baretta each week in a television cop show.

As an undercover detective on ABC, Baretta blasts pushers, pimps and thugs with words, fist and bullets.

Off camera, the 42-year-old Blake uses only words to lambast his latest target — the American Medical Association. In a study partly financed by the AMA, Baretta was rated the third most violent U.S. TV show — behind NBC's Quest, a Western series no longer on the air, and ABC's Starsky and Hutch.

With $25,000 from the AMA, the National Citizens' Committee for Broadcasting (NCCB) watched all prime-time shows last fall, counted each incident of violence and rated each program accordingly. Blake says the AMA should keep its nose out of his business.

"My suggestion to the AMA is tend to medicine, clean up the environment, keep us from getting sick," he says. While Blake, who will leave Baretta after next season, blasts the AMA and the NCCB, the executive director of the NCCB doesn't want to take him to task.

"Baretta happens to be one of my favorite characters," says Ted Carpenter from his Washington, D.C., office. "We've never said kick the show off the air. We've only said it was one of the most violent shows."

But he says shows like Baretta would be successful whether they have violence or not. "You have an interesting character, a good actor and a good concept to play with."

Blake says his decision to leave the show has nothing to do with the arguments over violence.

"I contracted to do a job. I was paid well for it and I did it the best way I knew how. Now the job is coming to an end, including the contract and all the rest of it, and when I fulfill my commitment, I'll split."

Blake has been acting since he was two. He's also street wise from his youth.

"I think I probably sat in front of my first counsellor when I was 10 years old. And from that day to this, I've probably been in front of more desks of more first sergeants, boys' vice-principals . . ."

Blake's high school career was punctuated with expulsions for disciplinary problems and he turned to narcotics briefly while in the army in Alaska.

"My personal opinion after reading these studies and leading the kind of life I live — the violence I saw in movies was a help to me. I felt it was a great release.

"And I was a pretty emotionally disturbed little kid. But when I went to Saturday afternoon matinees and watched the cowboys shoot 'em up and watched the leaping and the flying from buildings, it was a release for me, an outlet."

TV MAILBAG

By THOM MEAD

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. I would like to know something about Richard Hatch of "The Streets of San Francisco" and where I can write to him. — C.C. Belmont, CA.

A. Many people recognize Richard Hatch as the young man who played Philip Brent on the daytime soaper "All My Children," a role he performed for 2½ years before coming to Hollywood to play guest roles in such evening television programs as "Cannon," "The Waltons" and "Medical Centre."

Hatch was inspired to make acting a career when he performed in plays at Washington High School in his hometown of Santa Monica.

After attending Harbor College in San Pedro, Calif., he joined a Los Angeles repertory company. Soon after, the entire troupe headed for New York City, a move that was good for Hatch because it put him in the right spot to be cast in the major role of Brent in "All My Children."

While in New York, he also appeared in "Love Me, Love My Children," a successful off-Broadway production.

In June, 1972, Hatch gave up his role in the soaper and came to Los Angeles for more substantial roles in television and movies.

When actor Michael Douglas decided to leave "Streets of San Francisco," producer Quinn Martin, who had previously cast Hatch in several roles in "Cannon" and "Barnaby Jones," knew he had found an ideal replacement for the popular Douglas.

The address for Hatch is QM Productions, 1041 N. Formosa, Hollywood, CA 90046.

Q. What is the name of the island where the show "Code R" is filmed? — J.D., Victoria, B.C.

A. The series calls it Channel Island but it's actually Catalina Island, located about 26 miles from Los Angeles.

Q. Can you please tell me where to write my favorite television star, Robert Blake?—M.P., Wilmington, CA.

A. You may write Blake, star of the ABC series "Baretta," at Universal Studios, 100 Universal City Plaza, Universal City, CA 91608.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Thom Mead, TV Mailbag, in care of Prevue, Box 300, Victoria, B.C., V8W 2N4.

The Leopard (xx), on 8 at 12:30 p.m. A slow-moving giant epic based on the novel by Giovanni di Lampedusa tells the story of the aristocracy in Italy during the 1860s. Some exquisite photography. Burt Lancaster miscast as the noble patriarch. (1963).

Brushfire (xx), on 11 at 1 p.m. Predictable plot as a rescue party heads into the hills to rescue an American couple from the clutches of guerrillas in Asia. (1962).

Ulysses (xx) , on 5 at 3 p.m. Kirk Douglas and Anthony Quinn charge into the Trojan wars with a lavish cast and English dialogue, but somehow don't seem to rise above the usual level of spectacles. (1955).

A Sensitive, Pasionate Man (xx), on 5 at 9 p.m. The problems a couple face when the husband loses his job and turns to alcohol are probed in this social drama. David Janssen, Angie Dickinson. (1977).

She Waits (xx), on 12 at 9:30 p.m. Ghost story enthusiasts get still another tale of curtain rustlings and a mother-in-law predicting evil spirits in the shadows. Patty Duke, David McCallum. (1972).

That Hamilton Woman (x-xx), on 2 at 11:45 p.m. The romantic story of Lord Nelson's love for the beautiful Lady Hamilton, with its tragic outcome. Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier are fine stars in this interesting costume drama. (1941).

Our Relations (xx), on 13 at midnight. Stan Laurel and Oliver Hardy in an amusing comedy of errors with their twin brothers; beat scenes come in a beer garden. (1936).

The Gunfight at Dodge City (xx), on 6 at 12:10 a.m. Bat Masterson is elected sheriff and proceeds to clean up the town. Should sound familiar, and it is. Joel McCrea, Julie Adams. (1959).

Take a Giant Step (xxxx), on 8 at 12:20 a.m. Poignant drama which, at the time of its release (1959), was the most forthright statement yet made about what if felt like to be a black in a white dominated northern U.S. city. Johnny Nasy, Beah Richards, Frederick O'Neal.

Congo Crossing (xx), on 6 at 1:55 a.m. A predictable tale of fugitives from the law who congregate in a West Africa city where extradition laws are not practised. Peter Lorre is the best thing in the film. (1956).

Safari (xx), on 7 at 2:15 a.m. Victor Mature is the brave white hunter who leads a safari through Hollywood's impression of Mau Mau country. Adventure filled with action and Janet Leigh. (1956).

Spotlight on Movies

The Hanged Man (xx), on 8 at 1 p.m. A far-fetched mystical western features a gunslinger who survives a hanging and then dedicates himself to truth and justice. Steve Forrest, Sharon Acker. (1974).

Massacre at Fort Perdition (xx), on 11 at 1 p.m. Relatively fresh plot to this offbeat western as the sole survivor of a bloody massacre tells the whole story when he's placed on trial. Jerry Cobb, Martha May. (1965).

Fireball Forward (xx), on 5 at 3 p.m. Possibly written as a means of using excess footage left over after filming Patton, the story focuses on the command problems after a major general takes command of a division plagued by bad luck and poor morale. (1972).

The Mikado (xxx), on 9 at 8:30 p.m. Gilbert and Sullivan's operetta of shenanigans in the High Court of Old Japan, with a wadering minstrel wooing a noble lady, is performed by the D'Oyly Carte company. (1967).

The Rainbow Boys (xx), on 8 at 9 p.m. Three prospectors head off into the interior of British Columbia, but their different personalities lead them to strike more sparks than gold. Good photography of the Cariboo and some well-written comic lines help carry the plot. (1973).

Soylent Green (xx), on 12 at 9 p.m. Cardboard sci-fi has New York a hopeless mess by the year 2022. Hard-nosed policeman Charlton Heston stumbles on explosive secret. Edward G. Robinson's last film, it's too concerned with its own "important message" to be entertaining.

The Man From Colorado (x-xx), on 2 at 11:45 p.m. Sadist becomes a federal judge and runs things his way. Good western has an offbeat portrayal by Glen Ford. William Holden, Ellen Drew. (1948).

Swiss Miss (xx), on 13 at midnight. Laurel and Hardy in a contrived romantic story with music which tries hard to submerge the comic duo, but Stan and Ollie's scenes save the film, especially wyen Ollie serenades his true love with Stan playing tuba, (1938).

The Pigeon (xx), on 6 at 12:10 a.m. Although Sammy Davis works very hard as a private detective, this weighty and clinched feature falls short. Lots of fist fights and car chases with Pat Boone, Dorothy Malone.. (1969).

The Perfect Furlough (xxx), on 8 at 12:10 a.m. Service comedy which borders on slapstick most of the way. Tony Curtis works hard as a khaki-clad Lothario who gets into one insane predicament after another. Janet Leigh, Linda Cristal. (1959).

3:10 to Yuma (xxx), on 7 at 1:05 a.m. One of the best western dramas. A farmer, Van Heflin, takes the job of bringing a notorious killer, Glen Ford, into Yuma because he needs the money. They have to wait together in a hotel room until the train for Yuma arrives. (1957).

The Astro-Zombies (x), on 6 at 1:40 a.m. Low budget sci-fi thriller has mad scientist making loyal followers out of wired dead bodies. (1969).

Passage West (xx), on 6 at 3:10 a.m. Convicts on the lam join a wagon train heading for California under the leadership of a preacher. Lots of action with John Payne, Dennis O'Keefe. (1951).

Today's Highlights

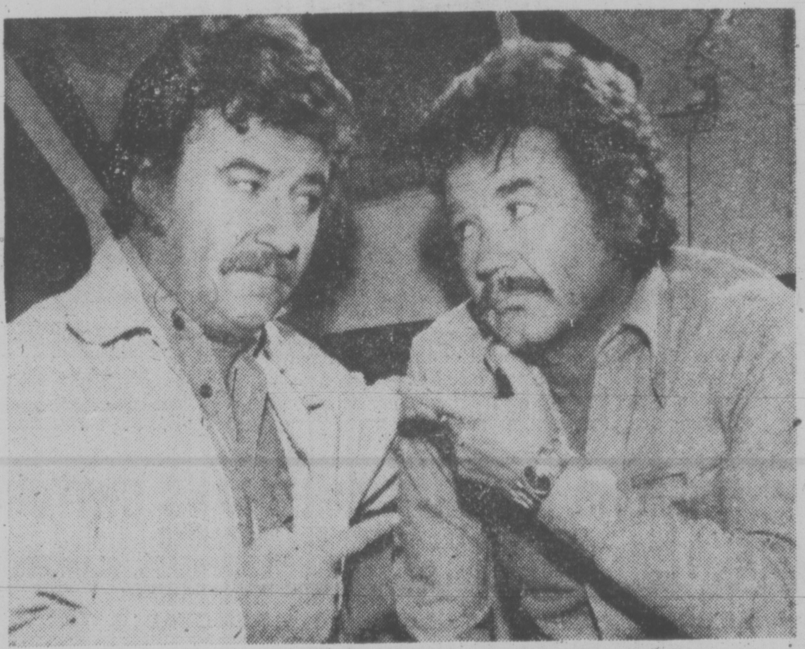
Billy Graham Crusade, on 12 at 7 p.m. War and peace is Dr. Graham's message in the conclusion of a three-part series taped in Asheville, N.C. with a variety of gospel and country singers.

Last of the Wild, on 4 at 7:30 p.m. Lorne Greene is the host of the program examining the problems faced by the shrinking herds of East African animals as drought combines with poaches and other hazards to make them extinct.

It's Hard to be a Penguin, on 9 at 7:30 p.m. Sex haibts and the social structure of a flock of Adelie penguins are examined in this nature documentary. Scenes of courtship and mating are included.

The Ra Expeditions, on 5 at 8 p.m. Pre-empting regular programming, this documentary movie was made on Thor Heyerdahl's expeditions to show ancient Africans could have crossed the Atlantic to North America.

Pilot-Comedy, on 7 at 8:30 p.m. Off Campus — the shenanigans of college students living in a coed boardinghouse is the basis of this pilot for a series which is not on CBS's announced fall schedule.



FOUND! A Bruno Gerussi Look Alike. The handsome fellow on the left is Kenneth Kryzanowski, a school principal from Medicine Hat, Alberta. The handsome fellow on the right is Bruno Gerussi, star of CBC-TV's The Beachcombers. Kryzanowski was selected from 500 entries in the Bruno Gerussi Look Alike Contest and will be appearing on an episode of The Beachcombers with Gerussi.

News Special, on 2 and 6 at 7 p.m. Results of the Ontario election, also interviews with some of the prominent candidates.

Oil and Water: Will They Mix? — Documentary, on 5 at 7:30 p.m. An updated program (the original was telecast in 1975), on the economic and environmental impact of oiltaker traffic on Puget Sound.

Thames River Pageant — Special, on 2 at 9 p.m. Satellite coverage of the Royal River Pageant featuring, among other events, Queen Elizabeth II sailing down the Thames River.

Maclear, on 8 at 9:30 p.m. Tonight's program spotlights the Royal Victoria Hospital in Belfast, where so many victims of Northern Ireland's guerilla violence are treated. The hospital has become "a centre for street-warfare medicine where new surgical techniques have been developed, and where doctors from around the world learn how the hospital functions in the midst of civil strife.

Royal Heritage — Documentary, on 2 at 10 p.m. This episode covers the reign of Charles I, under whose patronage Inigo Jones founded the English classical school of architecture, and designed some of the stately buildings shown during this hour, including the Banqueting House at Whitehall and the Queen's House at Greenwich.

ABC News Special, on 4 at 10 p.m. Fidel Castro Speaks (this program was postponed from an earlier date), deals with topics ranging from Castro's private life to his public image. The interview, with Barbara Walters, was taped last month in Cuba.

Spotlight on Movies

Ghost in the Invisible Bikini (x), on 8 at 1 p.m. Intended as a spoof of horror stories, it would be better if it were all invisible (1966).

Rope of Sand (xx), on 5 at 3 p.m. Hard boiled melodrama as adventurer returns to claim a hidden fortune in diamonds, fighting off a police chief and a diamond company executive. Burt Lancaster, Corinne Calvet (1949).

Mr. Denning Drives North (xxx), on 12 at 9 p.m. An aircraft manufacturer kills a blackmailer suffers the consequences of conscience until a lawyer friend comes to his rescue. Suspensful melodrama with John Mills, Phyllis Calvert (1951).

Man About the House (xxx), on 13 at 9 p.m. Well done, frequently absorbing drama about two spinsters who take a villa in Italy. One of them falls for a dashing young man who proves to be up to no good (1948).

Lovin' Molly (xx), on 4 at 9:30 p.m. Blythe Danner plays the part of Molly in this story of two close friends and their love affair with the same woman (1974).

Revenge of the Creature (xx), on 7 at 11:30 p.m. Another monster from the deep — this time a "gill man," who is smitten with the leading lady, who happens to be an ichthyologist (1955).

Ginger in the Morning (xx), on 12 at 11:30 p.m. A young girl, Sissy Spacek, becomes enamored of an older man during a hitchhiking trip across the southwest U.S. (1973).

A Case of Rape (xxx), on 6 at 12:10 a.m. Elizabeth Montgomery buries her "Bewitched" cuteness and gives a thought-provoking, believable performance as a woman who suffers indignities and loss when she goes to court after being raped twice by the same young man (1974).

Imitation of Life (xx), on 8 at 12:10 a.m. A four-handkerchief tear-jerker, remake with Lana Turner and Sandra Dee of an earlier version with Claudette Colbert and Hattie McDaniel, it gets a bit over sentimental at times (1959).

Sands of the Kalahari (xxx), on 13 at 12:30 a.m. A strange he-man adventure involving the survivors of a plane crash in the Kalahari desert. There's a fantastic finale in which Stuart Whitman pits his prowess agains a troop of wild baboons (1965).

Night Key (x), on 7 at 1:05 a.m. Unimaginative yarn about crooks forcing inventor to help them with their crimes (1937).

The Red Badge of Courage (xxxx), on 6 at 2:10 a.m. John Huston's masterful directing and impeccable casting in supporting roles makes this an unforgetable film. Based on Stephen Crane's novel about the U.S. civil war as seen through the eyes of a raw recruit who falters between cowardice and bravery. Audie Murphy, Bill Mauldin (1951).

The Further Perils of Laurel and Hardy (xxx), on 6 at 3:40 a.m. A compilation of hilarious sequences from Stan and Ollie's silent days. Contains the kind of bellylaughs that will wake up the rest of the household (1967).

Today's Highlights

Today, on 5 at 7 a.m. This program concludes its week in England with highlights of a river pageant and fireworks exhibition in honor of the Queen's jubilee.

Trespassers Will Be Eaten, on 2 at 5 p.m. A tour of the extensive African Lion Safari game farm in Rockton, Ont., where visitors must keep to their cars while the animals roam free.

The CIA's Secret Army, on 7 at 9 p.m. A special CBS report traces the web of American secret policy toward Cuba, including interviews with anti-Castro Cuban terrorists in Miami who claim they were trained by the CIA.

The Man Who Wouldn't Keep Quiet, on 9 at 9:10 p.m. This document bares the history of Soviet dissident Major General Pyotr Grigorenko who was committed to a mental hospital.

700 Club Telethon, on 11 at 11:30 p.m. Raising funds for local counseling services of the Christian Broadcasting Network.

Ideal for the Growing Family

This economical three-bedroom, full basement home is designed for a wide lot. The ranch style offers a maximum living area in a floor space under 1,000 feet and for future development has the same area in the basement.

There is a direct entry from the single carport to the utility, located on the main floor and has easy access from the living areas. By re-locating the utility in the basement this space could be used for storage or make an ideal mud-room. If you prefer this option you may wish to retain the carport door or add a door to the exterior at the rear.

The family kitchen creates an informal atmosphere, accented by the exposed brick of the chimney for the wood-burning fireplace in the living room.

The three bedrooms are serviced by a central three-piece bathroom, which also acts as a guest powder room convenient to all activity areas.

Enhanced by a covered entry and rustic siding, this traditional low-cost charmer has a long low appearance. With the additional basement area this house is ideal for the growing family.

Plans for design No. 70-1080 may be obtained at a cost of $50 for the first set and $9 for each additional set plus $3.50 for postage and handling. B.C. residents please include 7 per cent sales tax.

Send for the current edition of Select Home Designs Series No. 33 featuring imaginative decorating and home improvement ideas, plus more than 300 quality home plans of every type. Available for $2.25 ($1.75 plus 50 cents postage and handling). To order these items please send cheque or money order payable to the Home of the Week. Address to: Home of the Week, c/o Victoria Press, 382 West Broadway, Vancouver, B.C., V5Y 1R2.

SOAP OPERA SCENE

Red Hot Cindy 'Catching Fire'

By STEVEN SCHEUER

NEW YORK — Young Cindy French of "Search for Tomorrow" is catching fire in the storylines these days and Allison Argo, who plays the contemporary young lady, is up to the challenge.

Allison, an energetic, vibrant and verbal actress, loves her craft and is always studying to improve it. However, she doesn't restrict her enthusiasm to acting. Allison wants to encompass as many aspects of life as is humanly possible. In the past, she found herself spreading herself thin and suffered for it a bit, but she feels she's more organized now.

Theater was a way of life for Allison almost from the day she drew her first breath. Her parents, since divorced, ran a small summer theater in Cape Cod, Mass., for years and Allison was trouping on stage in small parts since she could walk.

Allison's determination paid off when she won a role in "Grease" and followed it up with parts in "The Lady From the Sea" with Vanessa Redgrave and the most recent Broadway revival of "The Night of the Iguana" with Richard Chamberlain.

"Days of Our Lives" (NBC) and "The Young and the Restless" (CBS) were big winners in Daytime TV magazine's 7th annual readers' poll this spring.

Results of the yearly tally, which amounts to one million votes by readers, found "Days" winning the Best Daytime Series, with its stars, Bill and Susan Seaforth Hayes, being tagged Best Actor and Best Actress. The soap opera apparently can't lose with the magazine readers, having won the Best Series award three times. Actor Hayes has also been a three-time winner, and his wife, Susan, has twice topped the Best Actress lists.

Runner'up was "The Young and the Restless." The two Hollywood-based shows managed to dominate the Best Acting categories. "Y & R's" Beau Kayzer, John McCook, Tom Hallick, Jaime Lyn Bauer and Janice Lynde occupy five of the 10 top spots, while Jed Allan and Suzanne Rogers led the way for "Days of Our Lives."

Plot Portens

It's another downbeat, depressing period for the folks in Salem on "Days of Our Lives." Rebecca's desire for a divorce gives Robert the sinkers. Val and David love each other, but that interracial marriage is up for grabs. Trish won't have an abortion, but does Mike love her enough to accept the truth? And then there's Sharon, recovering from a suicide attempt but still no closer to accepting her sexuality problems. One bright note — at least Marlena and Don are still lovey-dovey.

Ron Becker just can't do anything right on "The Young and the Restless." Every move to obtain custody of his daughter Karen backfires, and so do his schemes to get his wife Nancy out of the hospital. Meanwhile, mothers Vanessa and Kay spin their webs. Lonely Kay can only think of herself, and Vanessa waits for her daughter-in-law Lorie to trip.

Charlie learns about survival of the fittest on "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman." Wanda receives her first endorsement and Tom, Mary and Heather make out a breakfast list.

Showbiz dominates "All That Glitters." Nancy believes hubby Glen's performance fails to indicate talent, but insiders may see something else in Glen's screen test.

Energetic Allison Argo

The Stars of Yesterday

Where Are They Today?

By NANCY ANDERSON

HOLLYWOOD — "When somebody asked one of my grown children the other day, 'Aren't you proud of your mother?' he said, 'Sure. What has she done?' "

Jeff Donnell was laughing as she reported the incident, because if there's one thing she hasn't done it's develop a case of egomania.

On the other hand, a few of the things she has done is work as an actress in a variety of media, win the affection of a nationwide television audience as George Gobel's "spooky, old Alice," rear two children, survive serious surgery and embrace two new careers in middle age.

One of these careers is writing and the other is operating a wholesale giftware business in Los Angeles.

And she's also maintained a fine sense of humor and sense of balance. In addition, Jeff works as an actress "when anybody wants me," she interjects.

"Whenever a job comes along, I simply close up the showroom and go to the studio," she said.

"I just finished a part in 'Feather and Father' (a new television series), and George (Gobel) and I made a television commercial together which I hope will lead to a new show for us.

JEFF DONNELL: "I'm glad I've reached the age where I am considered a character actress."

"I'm glad I've reached the age where I'm considered a character actress; because that's what I always wanted to be.

"I've been in show business 35 years, and in one of my very first interviews, when the writer asked me about my goal, I said it was to play character parts.

"I think that was the first interview I put into my scrapbook."

As a writer, Jeff's been temporarily frustrated, because, she explained, she's been confronted with an impossible assignment.

"I suggested to an editor that I do an article on how women over 50 can get jobs," she said, "and the editor loved the idea and told me to write the story.

"But now I can't find any women who'll admit they're over 50.

"I don't mind admitting my age in the least and, anyway, I could hardly lie about it since I have a married son who's 6 feet 4.

"He was as tall as I was when he was born.

"He's an educator, but he's taking time off from work because he and his wife want to travel for a year. He wants to climb a mountain in Nepal.

"My daughter is a junior executive with a company in San Francisco so both of my children have turned out well.

"I'm very lucky that they are both independent in one sense yet very close in another.

"Phin — that's my son — and Sally, my daughter, are absolutely devoted to each other."

But, she assured, she is totally fit today.

"I don't play tennis because I'm too damned old for that," she declared, "but I feel super even though my adrenal glands were removed.

It's lucky I'm not vain because after my illness my hair fell out and I had to wear wigs for awhile.

"But then my hair came back in so you can see I'm practically as good as new."

A New Englander, Jeff trained at the Leland Powers School of Drama and the Yale School of Drama then joined the Farragut Playhouse at Rye Beach, N.H., before making her screen debut in 1942.

Her screen credits include, in part, Sweet Smell of Success, My Man Godfrey and Guns of Fort Petticoat.

As a television performer she worked in the acclaimed "U.S. Steel Hour" and "Playhouse 90."

However, it was not for one of her dramatic performances but for her work as Alice in The George Gobel Show that Jeff received (and still receives) widest recognition.

"And I said, 'No, I'm not. I'm a working actress.' "

Undercover Role 'Stretches' Birney

By DON FREEMAN

HOLLYWOOD — The disillusionment of Frank Serpico, former cop, is not apparent in David Birney, the actor who will portray him in the NBC series, a beareded, pipe-smoking fellow who was saying: "I've never met the real Serpico but he must be one fascinating guy and he's led a fascinating life."

Frank Serpico was an undercover agent with the New York police until he retired in 1972. A year earlier, he was shot in the face by one Edgar Echevaria. But Serpico lived. It is said — and perhaps there is a substance of truth to the story — that the following day, at a number of precinct houses of the New York Police Department, a collection was started to hire a lawyer for the hit man, Echevaria, and to pay for lessons to teach him to shoot with more accuracy.

Peter Maas wrote a best seller about Serpico and its final paragraph reads: "Serpico's leaving was a tragedy for the city, for the police department and for himself. All Frank Serpico ever wanted was to be a good cop. Perhaps that was the trouble; he had wanted it too much."

Now all that David Birney wants, in the wake of the movie version of Maas' book starring Al Pacino, is for the television adaptation to be equally successful. Birney brings to the assignment at least two helpful credentials — his father was an FBI agent and Birney himself, as befits an actor of talent and ambition, was born on an appropriate date — April 23, which is Shakespeare's birthday.

He has played Shakespeare with conspicuous success. His Romeo at the American Shakespeare Festival in Stratford, Conn., elicited praise from the New York Times' drama critic, Clive Barnes, who noted the "power and feeling" of his portrayal.

"Normally," says Birney, "the part of Serpico is not one I'd be cast in. People might say, 'Oh, wasn't he the boy in "Bridget Loves Bernie?" But people also said, 'Oh, you were in the "Adams Chronicles?" I didn't recognize you.'"

In the "Adams Chronicles," Birney played John Quincy Adams, aged 37 to 45, and his performance ranked with the best in that historical epic. Closer to the Serpico image, he has guest-starred twice in "Police Story."

Range and versatility are qualities that Birney prizes as an actor. "I keep trying to expand," he says. "I look for roles that stretch you. I like to jump into other faces, create different personalities from my own.

"Here is a man, Serpico, who was called a 'hippie cop,' which is a presumption that other people made who didn't know him. Serpico is a man who would read Yeats and Thoreau, he had a master's degree in sociology, which meant he had the best of many worlds — and he became an undercover cop with a raging hatred for any kind of corruption, especially when he found it in his fellow cops."

In pursuing the essence of his role, Birney immersed himself in research on what it is an undercover cop must be and that, essentially, is a man with an actor's memory and concentration as he suspends disbelief. An undercover man, Birney learned, plays a dangerous role. His life depends on his acceptance in that role and the disguise must be more than merely physical.

"I talked to undercover cops at the Los Angeles Police Department," Birney says, "and I heard some harrowing tales. I learned from them how easy it is to make a mistake when you're pretending to be someone else and you're trying to ease yourself into someone else's confidence.

Oberon Press, which has done for the short story in Canada what Nellie Melba did for the peach, has recently added two titles by Audrey Thomas to its list. The first, Ten Green Bottles, was originally published in the U.S. in 1967; it was Thomas's first book and this is its first printing in Canada. The other is a companion volume titled Ladies and Escorts. It contains 11 new stories, nine of which have previously appeared in "little" magazines or been broadcast by the CBC. To read these books together is to understand something of the creative mind in the process of growth.

Audrey Thomas, as writers go, is something of a displaced person. She has lived in Canada for several years now and has begun to produce stories with specific west coast settings. Yet three of her new stories are set in Africa and two in Mexico. She is not, therefore, and may never come to be described as, a "regionalist" writer. This characteristic is so untypically Canadian that it ought, if anything, to be an advantage. There's a catch, however.

Travel broadens. Writers who travel gain much, probably much more than most of us, but there's a corresponding loss, too. Everyone needs a context; it's not enough, over the long haul, to be perpetually on the outside looking in. If you can't or don't want to go home again, you start developing your own personal contexts — in ritual behavior patterns, for example, or as in Audrey Thomas's case, in psychic membership in some larger, boundary-spanning community.

It's impossible to read Thomas's stories without noticing how permeated with allusions they are. The allusions are not exclusively literary; often they're drawn from popular culture, the folklore of childhood, or the maxims of old age. This characteristic of her writing is so pervasive that it transcends mannerism, at least after you've read enough of Thomas' work to become familiar with it. But it can still be annoying.

Ten Green Bottles, for example, is full of stories with titles like Still Life with Flowers, Xanadu, The Albatross and so on. Even a story titled "Omo" turns out to be about an albino who is "Whiter than white", like the wash that's been washed with OMO. The book's cover, which is attractively designed in stained-glass-style with black borders, shows Jack and Jill with one green bottle in a tiny pail.

Its companion volume is adorned with a fearful, stain-glassed Red Riding Hood, alone in the forest and clutching her basket. She's a comic figure on the whole, though, placed under the book's title of Ladies and Escorts. The touch of satire, after the anxious intensity of the stories in Ten Green Bottles, is most welcome.

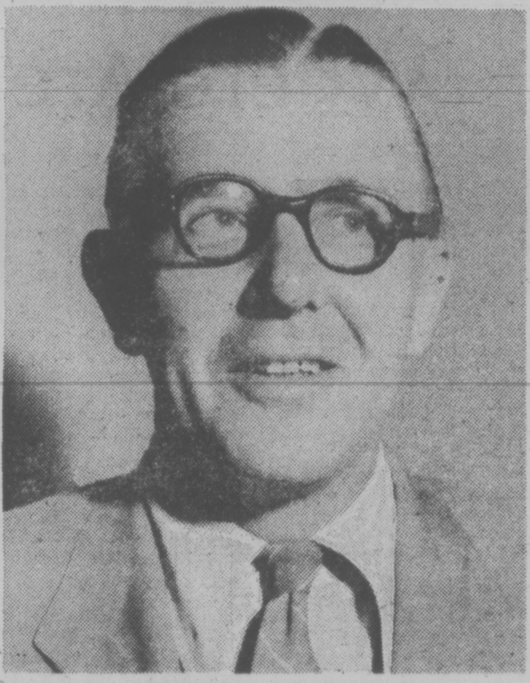
Audrey Thomas' stories tend to be character sketches in an unusual or exotic setting. Aquarius shows us a despondent husband on a visit to the Vancouver aquarium with his rapacious wife. Rapunzel is about a girl from Santa Cruz who spends a year in Accra. "Tear Here" uses casebook language to describe an old woman who collects plastic bags from supermarkets. (Here's a sentence from "Tear Here" which is so typical of Thomas that it's worth quoting in full: "The end of her cigarette was covered with lipstick and as I have a slightly queasy stomach, always — I find it difficult to read even something as steady, on the whole, as Arnold's 'Dover Beach' without having to cough once or twice into my hand and tell myself don't be ridiculous it's only a poem — I neither pursued her or the matter.")

After a steady diet of this kind of thing I began to suspect that my enjoyment of two of Thomas's stories, Green Stakes for the Garden, and Initram, was not entirely voyeuristic. (Green Stakes is nicely organized and has an attractive comic touch; Initram opens with a brief confession of what really happened outside the Green Stakes story and goes on to describe a crisis in the marriage of one of Canada's best-known writers, easily identifiable despite her fictitious name.)

In these two stories, Audrey Thomas has made intensely readable fiction of two very different kinds. One charms; the other has the unmistakable ring of psychological truth. She is a gifted writer, with reason to be proud of her accomplishments so far. And unless I'm very much mistaken, there's better still to come.

TEN GREEN BOTTLES, by Audrey Thomas; LADIES AND ESCORTS, by Audrey Thomas. Oberon. $11.95 cloth, $4.95 paper, each.



CROSSMAN . . . clarity, honesty

Inside Look At Politics By an Elitist

By WALTER YOUNG

In addition to having men about them who are sleek and fat and sleep nights prime ministers want as well to avoid colleagues who are diarists. Harold Wilson made the mistake of including Richard Crossman in his cabinet from 1964-1970 and now must pay the price. One cost is that Wilson's own book about his government during those years — which was tedious and faintly pompous at best — has been superceded. Crossman's day-by-day and blow-by-blow account of the inside of that Labor government not only paints a better and more reliable picture, it is also rich with astringent criticism and acerbic judgment.

Every weekend Crossman spent several hours dictating the week's events with the avowed determination to publish the final version as soon after he left office as he could. Strenuous efforts were made to prevent the publication of the first volume, in part because it was alleged that publication would breach cabinet secrecy. But in the main the efforts reflected a determination to avoid the embarassment that publication of Crossman's judgment of colleagues on both sides of the House would bring. In fact there is a book about the furor surrounding publication of Vol. I written by Hugo Young called The Crossman Affair.

Crossman did not live to see any of the diaries in final published form. He died shortly after correcting the proof of Vol I and missed all the fun.

For anyone with the slightest interest in politics, the diaries are good reading. For someone with more than a passing interest in the game and a smattering of knowledge about British politics in the 60s they are utterly absorbing. Diaries always fascinate; but diaries of men in power when written with the directness, clarity and honesty of the Crossman diaries, are very difficult to put down.

In this case the fascination is a matter of the several layers in the books. At one level there is the description of British government at work: cabinet meetings in Number 10, the tension of the Rhodesian crisis, the devaluation of the pound, the Torrey Canyon disaster. The nation's leaders in solemn conclave. Clay feet, the lot of them. Decisions reached in cabinet reflected as much as anything the internal politics of the party, of the particular ministries and, of course, of the cabinet itself. Much turned on the simple fact of who got to Harold first. And most turned on the influence of the senior bureaucrats, party notwithstanding. Crossman points out that ". . . it's broadly true that for five years now the civil servants have been dictating to ministers in successive governments the same kind of briefs irrespective of party."

For anyone who can remember reading the memoirs of Duff Cooper, the diaries of Crossman provide a stiff antidote to some of the romantic notions that Old Men Forget propagated. Some of the sophisticated and slightly decadent style remains — Crossman was, after all, an Oxford don, liked good wine and disliked official functions — but most of the business of government is gritty, laced with pettiness, and shot through with the combatitive necessity of an adversarial system. Men in power, it must be said, are very much like Team Canada, you play the man before you play the puck, even in the Mother of Parliament.

Crossman struggled hard to keep his head above the water. After a full day of campaigning in London for the Labour party in the council elections, he fled to his farm at Prescote with some close friends, dined well and spent the evening listening to Beethoven's later sonatas. The next day he had to help Wilson deal with the animosity in Number 10 between Sir Burke Trend, cabinet secretary, and Thomas Balogh, Oxford don and economic consultant to Wilson. Trend disliked Balough and wanted him out because he often had Wilson's ear when Trend did not. (In Ottawa today Michael Pitfield is Trudeau's Burke Trend.) Trend won and Balogh returned to Oxford.

At another layer the diaries lay bare the relationship between the cabinet, the parliamentary party — the caucus in our terminology — and the general party membership. Like most democratic socialist parties, the British Labour Party suffered mightily from the wounds of the major ideological conflicts that occurred during its history. Policy consideration at the cabinet level necessarily involved careful attention to the sensitivities of the Labour MPs, the TUC and the constituency parties. For Crossman, who was Lord President of the Council and House Leader, this meant an endless job of placating, briefing, helping and hindering various party worthies over matters that ranged in significance from wage controls to honesty in selling hearing aids.

At still another level the diaries provide deft and revealing portraits of the men around Wilson and of Wilson himself. Crossman did not mince words, which is not too surprising. Sitting down of a Saturday and dictating impressions of the previous week, one is inclined to describe colleagues with a frankness often absent after an interval of years. Michael Stewart, best known as foreign secretary, comes off worst. Says Crossman: "He's becoming a bit of a nightmare. He's very honourable but he's also bureaucratic, vain and enormously sensitive about his own status. He's no good as a replacement for George Brown . . . he has no drive." Wilson is well portrayed as a man with remarkable tactical sense, an instinct for his opponent's jugular that distresses Crossman, but as a leader "he doesn't have any clear sense of direction." Wilson was, in Crossman's judgment, too much of a politician to be a first rate leader and too humane to be a first rate prime minister.

The last layer is the one that reveals Crossman himself. The diaries are direct and personal. He describes his unhappiness at leaving the Housing Ministry to become Lord President, a post he had no interest in partly because it was one with no staff and therefore offered no sense of one's authority. Crossman emerges as a man of taste and sensitivity, a snob who was much happier in the company of Cecil King than many of his Labour colleagues and who could not suffer fools gladly. His success with his Coventry constituency reflected this patrician streak. He enjoyed the market place but welcomed the retreat to his farm, his wife and children, his book and his Chateau Latour, 1937.

Crossman was successful in preventing politics becoming an endless burden of meetings, reports, speeches. Like many of his colleagues, he had mastered the art of keeping both sides of his life going, in part by keeping his socialist zeal in check and adopting what is popularly known as a philosophical approach to government. On more than one crisis occasion he urged his cabinet colleagues not to cry over spilt milk and then dashed off to dine with friends where the conversation would be brilliant and probably never touch on devaluation, wage controls, or the intransigence of Ian Smith. Not that he did not take his job seriously and do it well — he did and was a major power in the government — Crossman simply learned to use his time judiciously. Writing these diaries was one such use and time well spent it was.

A Penetrating Look at Period When Europe Buffeted by Social Change

Every generation tends to look back with envy to earlier times when people led ordered lives in a world where all shared a set of values that were constant. This illusion — because that's what it is — is born of the belief that the past must have been happier for all because of the ready acceptance of a stratified society with its comfortable certainty that nothing would ever alter radically.

Thus, Europeans at the turn of the century — the period known as the belle epoque — are assumed to have enjoyed a world of style, luxury and contentedness. Like all generalizations there is a modicum of truth in this, but by and large the assumption is false.

Actually, most Europeans living on the eve of the First World War were deeply conscious of, and greatly troubled by, the rapid changes that were tearing them from their traditional ways.

Sociologists have explored this, but their jargon has proved to be a barrier to understanding by laymen, and anyway their localized approach precludes useful comparison. Now, an eminent American historian, Edward R. Tannenbaum, has come to grips with the subject by dealing with all Europeans in a cultural history titled, 1900: The Generation Before the Great War.

* * *

Tannenbaum has chosen 1890 to 1914 as the pivotal years because it was during that period that the mass of people were suddenly confronted with such innovations as compulsory education, cheap daily newspapers, automobiles, subways, movies, and the movements for sexual liberation and the emancipation of labor and women.

The key to this book is the word 'modernization' and it's worth spending a moment defining the word which, today, has acquired a bad name thanks to homogenization, pollution, lack of privacy, and computerization that has reduced our identities to numbers.

Modernization really refers to the long-term transformation of societies by industrialization, urbanization, bureaucratization, and the extensions of social mobility and political participation.

Europeans of 1890-1914 were the first to face modernization on a grand scale and, according to Tannenbaum, they didn't take kindly to it. Although the first to accept modern ways of mastering their environment and earning their living, they resented having to change their social and political arrangements and the cultural forms that gave meaning to their lives.

* * *

If we accept the fact that people feel at home only in their own society (political economic, and social structures which govern behavior) and culture (which gives people their view of reality) then it is readily apparent that any dramatic and large-scale uprooting of people from their familiar worlds is bound to create conflict and discontent because learned cultural standards are suddenly forced to compete with moral orientations based on unfamiliar views of reality.

Tannenbaum shows how the conflict was unsatisfactorily resolved by causing the masses to become more self-conscious about their occupational, sexual, and class status, their nationality, and their place in the power structure, with the result that the new outlook became increasingly secular, materialistic, and self-centred.

Modernization has been a continuing process, born of new knowledge accumulated over many centuries; what warrants a study of the period 1890-1914 is the fact that large-scale discontent was provoked by the unprecedented speed of change — and a look at that period explains the genesis of many of our current woes.

Professor Tannenbaum has worked diligently in the dusty archives of many countries to unearth a lot of out-of-the-way material for this book, with the result that it is packed with fascinating information that cannot possibly be digested at a single reading.

He covers all of Europe from Britain to the Urals and he shows that although modernization occurred at a different pace in different countries, its effect was as traumatic in backward Russia and the ultra-conservative Austro-Hungarian Empire as it was in the heavily industrialized nations of western Europe.

First, we see how modernization reached the masses in the form of more goods and services, compulsory education and therefore widespread literacy, and cheap daily newspapers which virtually replaced Church and State as social arbiters. Materialism led to voluntary family planning, open discontent of women denied their basic rights, and to the growth of unionism as a means of obtaining a larger slice of the pie of plenty.

* * *

Tannenbaum details how aristocrats and the upper-middle class — those most threatened by modernization — fought a rearguard action against change; then, when the struggle proved an unequal one, elected to swim with the tide to ensure their pre-eminence in the new political, industrial and social society.

Modernization made people more mobile. Country people who flocked to the cities and were unable to achieve vertical social mobility, began to emigrate in unprecedented numbers. Those who remained engaged in class warfare, which is endemic in a class society.

Tannenbaum perfectly understands the class structure of Europe, with its many sub-classes with their own sub-cultures, and because of this I found this chapter of surpassing interest, although some readers may become even more engrossed by the chapter devoted to the decline of religious influence and the deterioration of morals. Sexual attitudes of the period will come as a shock to some modern young people who appear to think they invented sex!

A chapter on popular culture shows that the mass swing away from religion began in the period 1890-1914 when encouraged by newspapers people sought recreation, amusement and more and more "consumer" goods. The masses opted for spectator sports, vaudeville, light fiction without moralistic overtones, and "things".

* * *

It was an age of new concepts and perceptions with Freud shocking everyone with his theories of infant sexuality, Christabel Pankhurst being jailed as a suffragette, and Picasso and Braque confounding the art world with their first cubist paintings. It was also the age of radical protest when peasants rebelled in Sicily (1893), in Russia (1905) and in Romania (1907). And the Zionist movement was founded in 1897 by Theodore Herzl. It was truly an age of ferment — vividly reflected in the arts and by a wave of nationalism which led inexorably to the First World War.

1900: The Generation Before the Great War is splendidly illustrated and, what's more, pictures are placed throughout the work facing relevant text, a pleasure I haven't experienced for a very long time.

This is a very fine book — impressively wide in scope, detailed, erudite and, one might justifiably add, courageous. It's a truly inter-national cultural history of Europe.

Mapping a Blueprint For New Social Order

By JULIAN REID

For some years now I've been looking for a book that presents, briefly and cogently, an up-to-date perspective on the near future — one worthy of a place alongside Kenneth E. Boulding's now-classic The Meaning of the Twentieth Century.

Not that Boulding's brilliant little essay has lost anything in pertinence or perspicacity since 1964, when it was originally published — subsequent events have served only to underscore the continuing relevance of its insights. But the world has changed hugely over the intervening 13 years, and our immediate preoccupations have changed along with it. We need a fresh outlook — not to supplant Boulding's, but rather to supplement it.

An Incomplete Guide to the Future, by Willis W. Harman, is the book I was seeking. This brief, lucid, attractively illustrated paperback is one of the excellent Portable Stanford Series, in which various members of the Stanford University faculty share with the general public their dominating interests and insights. It is a model of its kind — a must for anyone seriously concerned about the present state of the world and the direction in which events are willy-nilly carrying us.

An engineer by training and a humanist by avocation, Harman is director of the Centre for Study of Social Policy at the Stanford Research Institute, and from the 1950s has been actively involved in the Human Potentials Movement. His approach to the besetting problems of our time thus balances the humane and the technical, doing full justice to both.

The underlying thesis here is the same as Boulding's — that our industrialized society is currently undergoing "a change involving all our social, political, and economic institutions; our social roles and expectations; and even the basic premises involving modern culture and values. This change is not just an evolutionary development from one phase of history to another. Rather, the evidence suggests that the technologically advanced nations of the world may be approaching one of the great transformations of human history."

Harman's development of this by-now-familiar thesis is exceptionally illuminating. Every society, he argues, is characterized by its own "dominant paradigm" — a distinctive ideal image of what existence is all about. By shaping its basic ways "of perceiving, thinking, valuing and doing," this paradigm sets the particular style which distinguishes all the society's activities and cultural manifestations.

The dominant paradigm of the industrial era so far has been basically materialistic. Capitalists and Marxists alike agree on the guiding premise that Man is fundamentally an economic animal, his behavior dominated by worldly motivations. Both strive towards an earthly paradise of limitless affluence and material prosperity; and in order to achieve this ideal both champion "a growth-and-consumption ethic" in which industrial productivity is the be-all and the end-all of human existence.

But today, Harman argues, this once-powerful paradigm is rapidly breaking down. On the one hand, the old ideal of ever-increasing productivity is on a collision-course with the increasingly obvious "limits to growth" set by our planet's inherently limited resources; on the other, it is losing its former appeal to the citizenry at large.

"We currently live," he observes, "without the benefit of powerful positive myths, symbols, and images of the future. The industrial system has immense drive but is out of control; no clear and satisfactory guiding images and goals remain to give it direction. This lack of a beacon could be fatal ... Discovery of a suitable guiding image of the future is clearly our society's most crucial task."

Yet an alternative, "transindustrial paradigm" — "a newly emerging image of man, which promises to restore paramountcy to the quest for human growth in a humane society" — in terms of which all our most pressing problems are clearly soluble, is already taking shape around us, whether or not we permit ourselves to see it. What circumstances demand, Harman contends, is an open-minded recognition of this emerging blueprint for a new social order along with a whole-hearted commitment to its ideals. On the question of whether or not we can rise to this collective challenge the entire future of civilization depends.

CUBA:

With Friends Like That . . .

By JACK SCOTT

Fidel Castro with young visitor, Michel, son of Pierre Trudeau

I am for the Cuban Revolution. I do not worry about it; I worry for it and with it.

C. Wright Mills

It seems certain that the next significant chapter in the short history of Fidel Castro's Cuba will be a movement from the so-called right — United States' business — and that the left, so united in support of Castro since he marched into Havana in January, 1959, should now seem more critical than helpful.

Like C. Wright Mills, an eloquent disciple of the left, those old friends now seem to do more worrying about method than fact. It's not calculated to provide comfort for Cuba. They must be uneasy, at least, with so many kibitzers peering over their shoulders, babbling gratuitous advice.

There's little doubt that the first tentative manoeuvres to bring about a restoration of diplomatic relations between Washington and Havana, though it will not happen overnight, comes from pressure by the hard-headed and apparently implacable American industrialists.

A Natural Link

Although they've successfully skirted the trade embargo by doing business with Castro through their Western Europe branches, they now want direct trade in a potentially lucrative, available market, particularly in advanced technological products, fertilizers and farm equipment. Cuba clearly wants and needs that natural commercial link and may be prepared to make concessions to get it.

It was interesting to note that when the first group of U.S. businessmen went to Cuba last month they were impressed by what they saw and by Castro's conciliatory attitude. Said one industrialist: "I wouldn't applaud his (Castro's) ideology. I was cheering his performance — it was spectacular."

Meanwhile, Cuba's faithful left-wing supporters, in both Western Europe and on this continent, seem anything but faithful. The sound of their polemics has taken on such a new intensity that Cubans may well wonder who their real friends are.

That this has been coming for many years is known to every visitor to Cuba. Having seen the ornaments of incipient socialism, they were quick to praise, but often just as quick to embark on endless discussions of the revolution's direction. This was wrong, since it went against the teachings of Karl Marx, that was wrong since it went against the dialectics of docrinaire communisim. So it went.

Curiously, only those who came upon Cuba from any point south, who knew the contrasts of princely wealth and desperate squalor common to every nation in Latin America and in the Caribbean, were uncritical, more inclined to think of Cuban socialism as a home-grown experiment in human decency and less given to formula and theory.

The point is well made by Ronald Radosh, a history professor at City University of New York, who, giving his first impression of Havana observes, ". . . unlike the other Latin American countries, there are no beggars, no signs of extreme povery and despair, and the people appear well-clothed and in good health. This, perhaps, is the strongest contrast for anyone who has lived in or travelled through Mexico, Venezuela, or scores of similar nations." A nit-picker, himself, Radosh too often overlooks that simple fact.

So the Soviet Union poured in the financial help (the usual figure is a million dollars every day) and Castro had, indeed, opted for an eventual communist system. So what? His revolution was making life bearable for every adult who went along and rich with promise for every child. Even that depressing sight of the disenchanted at Varedero Airport, leaving for Miami, was simply a sad consequence of the insurrection against a tyrant.

Hopes, Prejudices

Not so with those observers who did not see Castroism in comparison with capitalism in the southern hemisphere. Instead, they saw it as a part of a world-wide movement that embraced their own hopes and prejudices. When Castro, in their opinion, went wrong in any ideological sense they all but vaulted into print.

Such well-meant criticism became a torrent when, in 1971, the Cuban poet, Heberto Padilla, was arrested and jailed for what the Castro administration called counter-revolutionary work, certainly one of the many mistakes of the revolution's leaders, yet hardly significant in an otherwise far-reaching (and often chaotic) time of change.

Yet this alone (although Padilla subsequently repented) alienated many of the Cuba's left-wing defenders, among them Jean-Paul Sartre, Julio Cortazar, Carlos Fuentes, Jose Revueltas and Carlos Fanque. It became clear that no mistakes would be tolerated. As it happens, this was but one example of left-wing supporters who could and would defect, so to speak, at any sign of betraying their own lofty concepts and idealism.

There are many more, regrettably, in "The New Cuba: Paradoxes and Potentials," a compilation of essays by journalists and professional left-wing academics. Considering that it is sorely dated, wordy and such text-book dogma, it should sell more than it deserves in view of the possibility of Cuba once more being open to the American tourist.

There is much earnest debate, too, on the Cuban motivation — whether, in fact, there is a "material" or "collective" incentive behind it all. Again, more questions are raised than answered.

Probably Arthur MacEwan, of Harvard University, comes closest to the truth in arguing that both have a place in the thinking of the average Cuban. "Clearly," he concludes, "while Cuba's wage and salary structure does provide some basis for the operation of personal incentives, the situation is most accurately described as one of great income equality. As well as undermining motivation based on an interest in getting more for oneself, the equality creates attitudes conducive to the operation of collective incentives: people correctly perceive that their efforts are in fact benefiting the collective rather than any privileged group."

The point is expanded by Frances FitzGerald, a Pulitzer Prize-winning journalist, who, in 1974, wrote a generally favorable report of what she has seen in Cuba.

"The reverse side of the scarcities and the restrictions that accompany them," she noted, "is the freedom that all Cubans now have from pressing economic worries. All medical services are free, and so is all education — including extension courses for adults who wish to study while working. In a country where unemployment was high and seasonal labor was important to the sugar cane industry, there is now full employment and almost total job security. Those who cannot earn enough — the criterion is 25 pesos a month per person in each family — recieve free food and housing. Pensions run from 55 to 100 per cent of a workers' final salary. Food bought under the rationing system is within the means of the lowest-paid worker, and rents are calculated at six per cent of a worker's income . . ."

Story Mishandled

Inevitably, as in any collection such as this embracing interpretive views, there are those contradictions which caused one observer to call the Cuban Revolution "the worst-covered story in the history of journalism."

While Hans Magnus Enzenberger, a well-known German author, finds that "political power in Cuba is exclusively in the hands of a tiny number of persons who huddle around Fidel and are under no party discipline whatever," MacEwan takes quite an opposite line. "To enter Cuba's Communist Party," he notes, "a person must be elected by the other members of his or her workplace ... In a context where the workers' role in decision-making is expanding it would seem reasonable to assume that such elections are not simply rubber-stamp procedures."

Again, Radosh makes the essential point, one that will certainly be shared by those Americans who may visit those shores, just 90 miles from home, in the future:

"My own views have wobbled back and fourth from book to book and conversation to conversation," he writes, "and I don't pretend that I've unravelled them, even to my own satisfaction. This may well reflect, too, I feel, the abrupt, sometimes contradictory, shifts in the Cuban Revolution itself. On two matters there seems to me (and to almost all those on the Left to whom I've talked) no dispute: the abysmal conduct of the United States government in attempting to destroy the Revolution and to manipulate the Revolution's enemies; and the enormous accomplishments of Castro's Cuba to date in improving the material well-being of its people."

Probably the truest word in this odd, carping collection, comes from MacEwan. "All in all," he writes, "my own reading of the evidence is that Cubans are continuing to make progress in constructing a socialist society characterized by equality, collective incentives, and mass participation in decision-making. The Cuban road to socialism, however, like all roads to socialism, has its share of traffic hazards. To get a good start on the trip is not to finish it."

Americans may soon see that for themselves. Meanwhile "The New Cuba" may be read with interest — and with a large grain of salt.
